SIMER JUBILES BUBLIQUEION SERIES

CONTRIBUTION OF MITHILA TO SANSKRT KAVYA AND SAHITYAŚASTRA

TRILOKANĀTHA JHĀ

RASHITRIYA SANSKITI SANSTHAN

The book presents a brief overview of the contribution of Mithila's Kāvya and Sāhitya Śāstra. It introduces the authors and their works related to different branches of Sāhitya such as Poetry, Prose, Campū, Drama, Poetics and Prosody.

An attempt is made to include the recent works and the author has also tried to examine the date of the writers of Mithila Province.

आशुलोषं उस्पर्यी अध्यक्ष क्ष नारायणस्वर वन वदाब गांगति (लग्न)

SILVER JUBILEE PUBLICATION SERIES - 2

CONTRIBUTION OF MITHILĀ TO SANSKRT KĀVYA AND SĀHITYAŚĀSTRA

SILVER JUBILEE PUBLICATION SERIES - 2

CONTRIBUTION OF MITHILĀ TO SANSKRT KĀVYA AND SĀHITYAŚĀSTRA

आशुलोब अवस्थी नारायां बी नारायांक्रक ४३ वराव सामित (८१५)

TRILOKANĀTHA JHĀ

RASHTRIYA SANSKRIT SANSTHAN NEW DELHI 1995 Publisher:

Dr. Kamlakant Mishra Director, Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan, A-40, Vishal Enclave, Raja Garden, New Delhi-110027.

© Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan

Silver Jubilee Publication Series

FIRST EDITION: 1995

VIKRAM SAMVAT: 2052

Price : Re 5 0 0 0

Printer :

NAG PUBLISHERS 11A/U.A. (Post Office Building), Jawahar Nagar, Delhi 110 007.

FOREWORD

I have great pleasure to present this volume of Silver Jubilee Publication Series of the Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan to our esteemed readers. The Volume varily represents the goodwill and cooperation, the Sansthan has all along been receiving from the distinguished scholars all over the country.

The Sansthan was established in October, 1970 as an autonomous apex body under the Ministry of Human Resource Development, Govt. of India with a view to promoting, preserving and propagating Sanskrit learning in all its aspects, with special reference to the indepth shastraic learning. Apart from conducting the regular courses of studies at the various constituent Vidyapeethas, it has been bringing out invaluable publications representing dissemination of knowledge contained in the Shastras.

Thanks to the continued help, encouragement and support from the Ministry of Human Resource Development, Govt. of India that the Sansthan has grown by leaps and bounds and has been able to render its services to promotion of Sanskrit learning at national and international levels and is now completing its 25th year. It is quite in the fitness of things that the Sansthan decided to bring out 25 scholarly monographs in commomeration of the Silver Jubilee year of the Sansthan.

The present monograph is a unique one of its kind. It gives an authentic and ready information of the scholars of Mithila and their contribution to Kavya and Sahitya Shastra. Here the learned author Dr. Trilokanatha Jha took much pain to include the contemporary contributions also.

I express my sincere thanks to Prof. T.N. Jha, former Head of the Department of Sanskrit, L.N. Mithila University, Darbhanga, who has kindly consented to contribute this scholarly work on this auspicious occassion.

It is my duty to mention the services rendered by my colleagues specially Dr. Savita Pathak and Dr. R. Devanathan for organising the various academic programmes particularly the publication of the Silver Jubilee Series.

My thanks are also due to M/s Nag Publishers, who have worked hard to bring out the monograph in time and enabled us to release the same on the Valedictory function of the Silver Jubilee Celebrations.

K.K.MISHRA

Dt. 11.10.1995

Director Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan New Delhi

PREFACE

Mithila, the land of Janaka, hardly requires any introduction to a student of Sanskrit. For, it has carved a niche for itself in the temple of Sanskrit learning. Since time immemorial thousands of sons and daughters of the soil have been enriching Sanskrit by their valuable contributions to different branches of knowledge - philosophy and grammar, smrti and dharmasastra, astronomy and astrology, poetry and prose, campu and drama, rhetoric and prosody, poetics and drama-turgy, music and dance, lexicon and anthology, tantra and rituals, politics and erotics etc. Many of them polyhistors famous for their versatility. They all led a life dedicated to learning and received the highest distinction in the academic field. They kept the glow of intellectual luminosity undiminished through the ages and brought an unstinted praise - an undying fame for their place of birth.

Showering encomiums for one's own state of origin can be treated as a spontaneous overflow of patriotic feelings but the words of a scholar of a neighbouring state extolling his neighbouring state to the skies cannot be dismissed with facile flippancy. Kavikarnapūra of Bengal pays glowing tributes to Mithilā in his Pārijātaharanamahā kāvya. He says:

"O Lotus-eyed one! behold yonder this is Mithila, the birth place of Janaka. Here the goddess of learning dances with pride on the tip of the tongue of the learned. (XVII-59)

The above eulogistic reference to Mithila may

Preface iii -

in verse. We have attempted to discuss them seriatim.

We take this opportunity to express our deepest gratitude to one and all, who have wielded their pen on Mithila. We are thankful to Dr. K.K. Mishra, Director, Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan, New Delhi, at whose instance the present monograph has been prepared.

Since the time at our disposal was less than two months, it will be prepostrous to claim that the present volume is comprehensive and it contains all that is required. Naturally, it must suffer from omissions and commissions and for these we are solely responsible. We, however, crave the indulgence of Sahrdaya-readers to pick up the solid grains of information and discard the chaff. For,

"hamso hi kşīram ādatte tanmiśrā varjayatya pah"

We shall remain grateful to all readers who extend their co-operation by suggesting emendations for the better. We feel, we have been a bit liberal in assessing compositions but we have not ignored their defects totally. In defence of our assessment let us quote what Śrīharşa says in the Naiṣadhīyacarita:

"Khalatvam alpīyasi jalpite 'pi tad astu bandibhramabhūmitai'va" (VIII-32 cd)

Darbhanga 31.08.95 TRILOKANĀTHA JHĀ

CONTENTS

	Preface
1.	Poetry		1
2.	Prose		. 81
3.	Campū		85
4.	Drama	F	92
5.	Poetics		115
6.	Prosody		136

1. POETRY

The early history of poetic composition in Mithilā is shrouded in mystery. The earliest reference to classical Sanskrit poetry available is to his father, Nīlāmbara by Govardhanācārya in his Āryāsaptaśatī¹ Unfortunately, there is no material available to us to assess his poetic talent.

GOVARDHANĀCĀRYA

Traditionally believed to be an inhabitant of village kariyauna in Samastipur district, Govardhana was the son of Nīlāmbara. Balabhadra was his younger brother and Udayana his devoted disciple. He gratefully acknowledges the help rendered by them in the composition of his only available work, Āryā-saptaśatī. This Udayana is different from and junior to the celebrated authority on Indian Logic, who dates his Lakṣaṇāvalī as Śāke 906, corresponding to 984 A.D.

Govardhana, as is evident from a use in the Āryāsaptaśatī, received patronage of a Sena-king, who was a connoisseur of all arts. Ananta Bhatta, cf. kavim aham ušanasam iva tam tātam nīlāmbaram vande // - introductory verse on 38 (ed).

cf. Verse No 701. Some scholars have interpreted the expression sisyasahodara to mean two pupils, who were full brothers.

<sup>3.</sup> cf. tarkāmbarānka.

cf. sakalakalāḥ kalpayitum prabhuḥ prabandhasya Kumudabandhoś ca / senakulatilakabhūpatir eko rākāpradoşaś ca // introductory verse No 39.

the author of the Vyangyārthadīpana, a commentary thereon, is inclined to identify the king with Pravarasena of Kashmir, the author of the Setubandha. This view is also shared by MM. Sacala alias Bhavānīnātha, also a commentator on the Āryāsaptaśatī. But on the basis of an inscription, Govardhana is believed to have adorned the court of king Lakṣmaṇasena, the great patron of learning in Bengal. This makes him a contemporary of Śaraṇa, Jayadeva, Umāpati and kavirāja. In his Gītagovinda Jayadeva refers to Govardhanācārya and eulogizes his unique poetry brimming with erotic sentiment. This places Govardhana in the end of the eleventh and beginning of the twelfth century A.D.

Govardhana's erotic veses have found favour at the hands of compilers of anthologies. The Sūkti-muktāvalī, the Śārngadharapaddhati and the Padyāvalī quote verses composed by him.

The Āryāsaptaśatī, as the very name suggests, is a collection of 700 verses composed in Āryā metre. The number of verses varies in different editions. The verses arranged in vrajyā-s, in alphabetical order, are all saturated with the erotic sentiment in all its different phases.

They are all muktaka-verses, each one complete in itself. The poet's source of inspiration is the Gāthāsaptašatī of Hāla. Although Govardhana lacks cf. govardhanaś ca śarano jayadeva umāpatih / kavirājaśca ratnāni samitau lakşmanasensya //.

cf. Śragārottarasatprameyaraca nair acarya gorardhana Spardhah ko'pi na viśrutah śrutidharo dhoyi kavih kşmapatih// -I-4 (ed) in the spontaneity and humour of Hāla's poetry, his diction and craftsmanship deserve unstinted commendation. Hindī-poet Bihārī, the author of Satasaī is deeply indebted to him for the depiction of touching moments of human life and picturesque description of the feminine form. Govardhana himself speaks of the beauty and elegance of his Āryā-verses.<sup>1</sup>

ŚRĪDHARADĀSA

Śrīdharadāsa was the son of Vaṭudāsa, a minister under king Nānyadeva, the founder of the Kārnāta-dynasty in Mithilā. He was a Raṅgavālī-kāyastha living in Mithilā, so says MM. Parameśvara Jha.<sup>2</sup> He compiled an anthology entitled Saduktikarnāmṛta in which a verse is attributed to Nānyadeva.<sup>3</sup>

GANGEŚA UPĀDHYĀYA

Gangeśa Upādhyāya, the author of the Tattvacintāmaņi, appears to have been a poet of note. His son, Vardhamāna calls him sukavikairavakānanendu. He himself is said to have spoken virinciprapance madanyalı kavilı kalı (Who is a poet except myself in the whole of the world?) As for cf. masṛŋapadarītigatayaḥ sajjanahṛdayābhisārikāḥ surasāḥ / madanādvayopaniṣado viśadā govardhanasyāryāḥ // -Introductory verse No 51.

Mithilätattvavimarśa - I-103.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide Verse No 819.

Prof. D.C. Bhattacharya: History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā - p.97.

<sup>5.</sup> ibid. p.96.

his date, professor Bhattacharya opines that he cannot be placed before 1300 A.D. by any means.1

MM. VIDYĀPATIŢHAKKURA

Then comes Vidyāpati Ṭhakkura, the immortal based of the language of Mithilā. His mellifluous songs became a bone of contention. For a long time Bengalese were adamant in treating his Padāvalī as a piece of Bengali poetry and he was himself declared a man from Bengal. However, he was rescued and allowed to return to his homeland, Mithilā, of course with added glory.

Vidyāpati was the son of Gaṇapati, the grand-son of Jayadatta and the great-grand-son Mahāvārttikanaibandhika Dhīreśvara of the Gaḍha-Bisapi - family of Maithila Brāhmaṇās of Kāśyāpagotra. A court-poet of the royal oinwar dynasty, Vidyāpati enjoyed the patronage of a series of rulers of the said dynasty, to list, Devasimha, Kīrtisimha, Śivasimha, Padmasimha, Lakhimādevī, Viśvāsadevī, Narasimha, Dhīra-matidevī, Dhīra-simha, Bhairavasimha, Candra-simha and so on. He has immortalized his patrons through his songs and other litrary works. It is generally believed that Vidyāpati was born in 1350 A.D. and he died in 1439 or 1440 at the ripe age of 89/90 but Late Prof. R.K. Chaudhary opines that Vidyāpati can be placed between 1360 and 1480 A.D.<sup>2</sup> ranging from moral tales and fables to abstruse texts of law and dharmaśāstra, from forms of letter-writing to the study of Tāntrika-cults. Since the scope of our present study is limited, we would concern ourselves to the following works alone and that too in the following chapter on prose:-

Apart from his increasing number of songs in maithili, we have got a good number of his works in Sanskrit and Avahatta on a variety of topics

<sup>1.</sup> ibid., p.103.

<sup>2.</sup> vide The Mithila in the age of Vidyapati, p.19.

5

- (1) Bhūparikramā
- (2) Puruşaparīkṣā

In the present context we would like to point out simply that the verse found in the two works mentioned above contain poetic perit.

CANDRAKALĀDEVĪ

Candrakalādevī was the daughter-in-law of Vidyāpati. She was the wife of M.M. Harapati Thakkura, the eldest of his three sons. In his Rāgataraṅgiṇī Locana quotes a lyric, in mixed Sanskrit and maithilī, composed by Candrakalā¹ Dr. Miśra refers to two versions of the verse.² She can safely be placed from the close of the fourteenth to the first half of the fifteenth century A.D.

JAGADDHARA

A Maithila Brāhmaņa of the Suragaņa-family belonging to Parāśaragotra, Jagaddhara is traditionally believed to be a Dharmādhikaranika (Office-incharge of the department of religion) at the court of Dhīrasimha. He was the son of Ratnadhara and iti vidyāpatiputravadhvāḥ - p.54; the lyric is cited on pp. 53-54, Raj Press, Darbhanga Edn.

Jayakānta Miśra: History of Maithilī Litrature - vol. I. p.198.

Damayantī, the grand-son of Vidyādhara, the great-grand-son of Tāntrika Gadādhara, the great-great-grand-son of Mīmāmsaka Rāmadhara, who was the son of Mīmāmsaka Caṇḍeśvara. Jagaddhara was the daughter's son of Sone of Banakujantī-family. He is placed in the first half of the fifteenth century.

He was a commentator. His commentary on the Meghadūta is entitled Rasadīpikā¹ and on the Gītagovinda is styled Sāradīpikā.² His commentary on the Bhagavadgīta is called Pradīpa.³ He has also commented upon the Devīmāhātmya.⁴ One Śivastotra is also ascribed to him. Besides, these are his commentaries on works of prose, drama and poetics, which will be referred to at later stages.

One Jagaddhara is also said to have commented upon the Kumārasambhava.

MM. BHAVANĀTHA MIŚRA

A scion of the Sarisava-branch of the Sodarapura-family of Śrotriyās, MM. Bhavanātha Miśra was the son of MM. Ravinātha and the daughter's son of MM. Vateśvara of the Māṇdara-family. He was a great philosopher. Some of his verses are preserved in the anthology entitled Vidyākarasahasraka, compiled by Vidyākara Miśra. Two verses of his dialogue with his son, MM.

Mītra: Notices, No 1967; Published by KSDS University, Darbhanga, 1982.

<sup>2.</sup> Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila - II - Nos 41, 62.

<sup>3.</sup> Mitra: Notices, No 2138.

<sup>4.</sup> ibid., No 2400.

<sup>5.</sup> Allahabad, 1942.

Śańkara, in the anyokti-style are fine specimens of poetic composition.

Always a non-suppliant, he was nick-named Ayācī. As he was the father of MM. Śańkara Miśra, he is placed in the fist half of the fifteenth century A.D.

MM. ŚANKARA MIŚRA

MM. Sankara Miśra¹ was the son of MM. Bhavanātha Miśra alias Ayācī. Bhavānī, daughter of Raghupati of the Khanāla-family was his mother. Till recently, it was accepted that MM. Sankara was present in the second and third quarters of the fifteenth century² but, on the basis of a verse composed by him in the praise of Emperor Babur, the present author maintains that it appears reasonable to conclude that he lived upto the beginning of the second quarter of the sixteenth century A.D. For, Babur reigned from 1526 to 1530 A.D.³

MM. Šaňkara was one of the greatest philosophers Mithilā has produced - "the foremost Nyāya-Vaiśeşika scholar" but he was a poet and dramatist as well.

For a detailed account of Śańkara Miśra vide 'Mithilaka vibhūti MM. Śańkara Miśra, Maithili Akademi, Patna, 1983 by the present author.

U. Miśra: History of the Indian Philosophy - vol.II p.324.

Vide the authors paper entitled "The date of MM. Śańkara, the philosopher poet of Mithila" presented in the thirty fourth session of the A.I.O.C., Visakhapatnam, 1989 (PR-168).

MM. Sankara has compiled an anthology of his own verses entitled Rasarnava.1 It contains the verses composed by him from time to time to refresh his mind tired by constant contemplation of abstruse principles of Logic and subtle nuances of thought embodied in dialectic treatises.2 These verses bear testimony to the poetic genius of the philosopher poet. Its discriptive talent is at its peak in the verses describing the kings and their courts, the ladies and their limbs but the most striking are his anyoktis. The Camatkara embodied therein attract the mind of even a casual reader. These anyoktis complete with, ray, at times excel, those of Bhanudatta preserved in his Rasapārijāta and of Kavišekhara Badrīnātha Jha, the author of the Anyoktisahasri.3 There is one Rasakallolasāroddhāra by MM. Śańkara preserved in the manuscripts library of the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga,4 but, on examination, we found it to be only an abridged version of the Rasarnava itself. Prof. D.C. Bhattacharya has referred to a poetic composition of Sankara entitled Panditavijaya,5 but we have not been able to see it.

MM. Śańkara is held in high esteem in Mithilā. He regarded as Śańkara, Lord Śiva Himself. Thse

First published by Late Dr. Amaranātha Jha, Allahabad, 1920. Then published by the Gangānātha Jhā Kandriya Sanskrit Vidyāpeeth, Allahabad, 1991, edited by Dr. Kišoranātha Jhā.

cf. tarkābhyāsapariśrānta-svāntaviśrāntihetave / ye ślokā vihitās teṣām sangraho'yam vidhīyate // - verse No 2 (Rasārnava).

Vide the autor's paper entitled "The anyoktis of MM. Śańkara" presented in the thirty second session of the A.I.O.C., Ahmedabad, 1984-85 (CS-25).

<sup>4.</sup> Ms No 796.

<sup>5.</sup> Vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā, p.134.

are numerous anectodes current in Mithilä pertaining to the worthy son and his worthy father,<sup>1</sup> but they are not being mentioned here for fear of the book being bulky.

GANAPATI

Gaṇapati,<sup>2</sup> also called Gaṇeśvara<sup>3</sup> and Gaṇanātha<sup>4</sup> was the son of Mahādeva, the younger brother of MM. Śaṅkara Miśra. He was the father of the celebrated Maithila poet and rhetorician, Kavirāja Bhānudatta.

On an examination of anthological sources, Chaudhuri has clearly distinguished between Gaṇapati and his namesakes, who flourished definitely earlier than our poet. For, the verses of that Gaṇapati have been quoted in the thirteenth century compilations like Sūktimuktāvalī and Saduktikarņāmṛta.<sup>5</sup>

As regards the age of our author it has been established, after a careful examination of genealogical records and other internal and external

Vide the author's paper styled "The glory that was Mithiladesa - I - Ayaci and Sankara", published in Manisa, the journal of the K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbhanga, in No 2, 1974.

cf. kṛtaharavinayo gaṇapati-tanayo - Gītagaurīpatikavya - X 1 (8) and yathā gaṇapataḥ kvyah - Rasapārijāta - I-2(a).

tāto yasya gaņeśvaralı - Rasamañjarī - last verse (No 138) and gaņeśvarakaver vaco - Rasapārijāta - X-126.

gaņanāthakṛtām pustim - kumārabhārgavīyacampū - I-30(a) and kavigaņanāthasutasya kaveriti - Gītagaurīpatikāvya -VI-2(8).

Vide J.B. Chaudhuri's paper entitled Sanskrit poet Ganapati II" - The Poona Orientalist - Vol. VIII Nos 38-39.

evidences, that his son, Bhānudatta, was born during the third quarter of the fifteenth century, say by the year 1480 A.D. and he (Bhānudatta) "flourished in the fist half of the sixteenth century". Thus, taking into account the institution of late marriage in those days, the birth of the father can safely be assigned to a prior round about 1435 A.D. and this is in consonance with the date of Gaṇapati's uncle, MM. Śaṅkara.

Chaudhuri opines that since the Subhāṣitāvalī in the present form was compiled about the fifteenth century, poet gaṇpati cited in that anthology cannot be the same as our poet. Here it is worthy of remark that the identification may be possible in the event f the said anthology being considered to have been omposition of the close of the fifteenth century.

Chaudhury has presented an analysis of the ses composed by our poet. He has taken into ount the verses preserved in anthologies like the lyavenī, the Padyāmṛtataraṅginī, the Sūktisundara, se Sabhyālaṅkaraṇa and the Subhāṣitasārasamuccaya.3

He has classified them under six heads - verses prtaining to (a) gods, (b) king, (c) women and love, (d) season, (e) nature and (f) miscellaneous verses.

In addition to these, Bhānudatta has preserved the verses of his father Gaṇapati with metienlous case in his Rasamañjarī, Rasataraṅgiṇī, Alaṅkāratilaka and Rasapārijāta with an unfailing sense of acknowledgement of authorship. In the Rasapārijāta alone Bhanudatta has preserved some 104 verses composed by his father.

Vide the concluding portion of Ramānātha Jhā's paper entitled "Kavirāja Bhānudatta" - The Patna University Journal - vol. III - Nos 1-2.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide J.B. Chaudhuri's paper referred to above.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide ibid. pp.141-142.

On an unbiased appraisal of these verses the greatness of Ganapati as a poet is a felt fact not liable to dispute. His mellifluous verses have a singular charm that can be better ralished than expressed. In the Rasapārijāta the son has rightly enlogized the poetic genius of the father. Besides, he is perfectly justified in saying that the blending of his verses with those of his father Ganapati is delicious as milk with sugar added to it.2 It is because of his poetic talent that Ganapati is mentioned in the genealogical records with the like dhakkākavi (a poet whose literary achievements are as evident as the beat of the drum) prefixed to his name. A critical and comparative study of the verses composed by Ganapati and Bhanudatta makes it clear that the father was gifted with a poetic insight of superior calibre. Rightly, the son calls him a Kavikulālankāracūdāmaņi3 (cresh-jewel among poets).

In addition to the verses adverted to above, Gaṇapati appears to have composed a work, Mahāmoda by name, as the compiler of the Subhāṣita-sudhāratnabhāṇḍāgāra informs us. 4 Tradition

cf. gaņeśvarakaver vacoviracanaikavācaspateļi prasannagirina- ndinīcaraņapallavadhyāyinaḥ / tathā jayati bhārati bhagavatī yathā sā sudh mudhā bhavati subhruvām adharamādhurī mlāyati // - X - 126.

yathāā gaņapateḥ kāvyam kāvyam bhāukaves tathā / ubhayoḥ sangamaḥ ślāghyaḥ śarkarākṣīrayor iva // ibid - I-2.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide Rasamanjarī - the concluding verse.

cf. muhurganapatim vande mahāmodavidhāyinam' vide kansekhara's introduction to the Rasapārijāta-p'ka', foot-note 3 and Dr. S.K. De - Proceedings of the A.I.O.C. - Allahabad Session Vol. I - p.42.

attributes the authorship of one more work, entitled Rasaratnadīpikā to Gaņapati from which a verse is quoted in the Rasatarangiņī.1

In fine, it may not be out of place to mention that the matchless erudition of Gaṇapati led the compiler of the Subhāṣita sudhā ratnabhāṇḍāgāra to call him an incarnation of Lord Gaṇeśa himself.<sup>2</sup>

JAYAKRSNA PARAMAHAMSA VISNPURĪ

Rāmapati or Ramāpati of the Taraunī-branch of the Karamahā-family opted for sainthood of the Vaiṣṇava order and became famous in Mithilā as Jayakṛṣṇa Paramahaṁsa Viṣṇupurī. He was the son of Ratidhara by his second wife, maura, daughter of Kuśa of the Udanapura-branch of the Jajivāla-family. The pañjī records only one son of Viṣṇupurī, Mahādeva by name. Ramānātha Jhā says "it appears, therefore, that Sanyāsī Viṣṇupurī was born in the second quarter of the fifteenth century."

Vişnupurī composed Bhaktiratnāvalī, a devotional work enlogizing Lord Vişnu. His disciple Paramānandapurī also wrote a devotional poem entitled Premacandrika.<sup>3</sup>

KAVIRAJA BHĀNUDATTA

Bhānudatta, son of Gaṇapati, was born in the illustrious Şarisava-branch of the Sodarapura-family

<sup>1.</sup> Vide I-8.

cf. gaņeśvarakaviḥ sākṣād avatīrņo gaņeśavaraḥ /.

Vide his paper "Paramahamsa Vişnupuri: His identity and age" in the Patna University Journal, January, 1945.

of Śrotriyās of Mithilā. On the basis of anthological works, Bhānudatta has been regarded as identical with Bhānukara or Bhānucandra, but some scholars have expressed grave doubts regarding their identity.<sup>2</sup>

However, Bhanudatta was born in the third quarter of the fifteenth century. He flourished during the fist half of the sixteenth. In his sojourn he enjoyed the patronage of several kings and princes. Prominent among them are as follows:-

- (1) Nizam II of Devagiri (1510-1553)3
- (2) Krishnadev Rai of Vijayanagar (1509-1550)4

cf. (a) J.B. Chaudhuri: Muslim patronage to Sanskrit learning Vol. I - pp.2-3, second edition, Calcutta, 1945
 (b) H.D. Sharma's paper entitled 'The Poet Bhānukara' published in the ABORI - vol. XVIII p iii - pp.243-258
 (c) U. Miśra's introduction to the Vidyākarasalusraka.

 (a) S.K. De - History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.245, foot-note 1 and some problems of Sanskrit Poetics (p.147), Calcutta, 1959

(b) G.V. Devsthali - New Indian Antiquity VII (1944) - pp. 111-117

(c) P.K. Gode - Indian Culture - III - pp.751-756.

According to S.K. De, the Nizam, patron of Bhānudatta is identical with Ahmad Nizam Shah, the founder of the dynasty, who founded the kingdom sometime between 1499 and 1507 (vide De: Some problems of Sanskrit Poetics - pp. 144-145)
 But according to R. Jha, the said Nizam is Budhan Nizam

But according to R. Jha, the said Nizam is Budhan Nizam Shah (1510-1553), the secod ruler of the dynasty (vide Jha's paper referred to above). We are inclied to endorse the views of the latter.

Vide J.B. Chaudhuri: Muslim Patronage to Sanskrit learning vol. I-p.6 - foot-note.

- (3) Virabhanu of Rewa (1523-1555)1
- (4) Sangram shah of Gadhmandala (1480-1530)2
- (5) Shershah, the emperor (1540-1545)3

The academic attainments of Bhānudatta led Late Paṇdita Rāmāvatāra Śarmā to remark:- "As a rhetorician and poet Bhānukara Miśra of Mithilā was richer in ideas and more delicate in diction than the famous Paṇḍītarāja". 4

Following in the foot steps of his father, Ganapati, Bhanudatta acquired high proficiency in poetical compositions. His verses bear testimony to his fine poetic talent. They have a singular charm that enthrals the readers. His discription of the objects of nature is characterized by depth of thought, softness of expression, limpidity of style and novelty of conception. In his description of heroines his poetic fancy is on the wings, at times reaching the pinnacle of poetic excellence. To all this adds grace his rhetorical perfection. His choicest embellishments, conched in a remarkably idiomatic phraseology, perspicuous and characteristic of the prasadaguna, are reared in an air of spoutaneity. Besides, his verses on holy places are all fine pieces of poetry.

In his Gītagaurīpatikāvya Bhānudatta emerges as a composer of mellifluous songs in the praise of Lord Siva.

P.K. Gode: Identification of Vīrabhānu, the patron of Bhānukara - The Calcutta Oriental Journal - Vol. II - No 10 (July 1935) pp.254-258.

Vide R. Jha's in introduction to the Sūktimuktavalī of Harihara (p.36).

<sup>3.</sup> Vide J.B. Chaudhuri, op.cit.

<sup>4.</sup> Vide J.B.O.R.S., Patna - vol. XV.

In Mithilā although the brāhmaņas are generally worshippers of six deities - Sūrya, Gaṇapati, Agni, Durgā and Śiva - the pañcadevatā and Viṣṇu, the sixth, they are specially devoted either to the Mother Goddess or Śiva, only rarely to Viṣṇu. In the opening verse of the Rasamañjarī his description of the Ardhanārīśvara- form of the Lord is simply superb¹ and his description of Lord Viṣṇu in His different incarnations as well as of other gods and goddesses is no less charming.² But he has composed a complete work eulogizing Lord Śiva in His different forms - the Gītagavīpati by name, imitating the style of the inimitable Gītagovinda of Jayadeva.

Although it goes without saying that by his self-praise no writer is held in high esteem, certain observations made by Bhānudatta in his works hold water.<sup>3</sup>

In his Alankāratilaka Bhānudatta invokes Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning, to seek her favour. With due humility characteristic of a writer of high order, he says:-

"O Mother Sarasvati! though on the subject these do exist certain works of my predecessors, yet you will kindly bestow your admiration on my work. For, although these do exist gems (of

Vide the verse beginning with 'ātmīyam caranam' et seq.

Vide Rasapārijāta - I, Rasatarangiņī - I -1, Alankāratilaka - I - 1 and Kumārabhārgavīya - I-1.

bhānor gītam sudhāsphītam - Gītagaurīpatikāvya - I - 2 and Vāgdevīšrutipārijātakusuma-spardhākari manjari - Rasamanjari - the last foot of the concluding verse.

MM. Śańkara Miśra has said in connection with his verses preserved in the Rasārņava. 1

The local tradition attributes the composition of an auto-commentary on the Gīta-gaurīpatikāvya by Bhānudatta, but, unfortunately, the said commentary is not available.<sup>2</sup>

RUCIKARA THAKKURA

Rucikara Thakkura, a śrotriya, was the eldest of the five sons of Maho. Keśava Thakkura, three by his first wife and two by his second. He was well-versed in poetic discipline. In the cause of his self-introduction in the opening verse of the Kāvyapradīpa his step-brother, MM. Govinda, calls him a poet<sup>3</sup> but since no work of his is available we are not in a position to assess his poetic talent.

HARŞATHAKKURA

Harṣā Thakkura was the youngest of the three full-brothers of MM. Govinda. He died a premature death and we have no information regarding his works but that he was gifted with poetic talent is evident from the feeling reference made to him by MM. Govinda towards the end of the Kāvyapradīpa. Besides, he has also cited a verse composed by Harṣa to illustrate contradiction between guṇa and

<sup>1.</sup> Vide Rasārņava - verse No 2.

Vide p.XVIII (Introduction to Kavirājabkānudattagranthāvalī edited by the present author, published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988).

<sup>3.</sup> cf. śrīgovindo rucikarakaveh snehapātram Kanīyān /

Vide verse beginning with jyeştha sarvagunaih et seq on p.403.

kriyā. In his anthology entitled Vidyākarasahasraka Vidyākara has presented one more verse composed by Harşa<sup>2</sup>

PADMANĀBHA MIŚRA

Padmanābha Miśra, son of Dāmodara Miśra the author of Vāṇībhūṣaṇa belonged to the Dīrghaghoṣa-(Dighavaya-) family of Maithila Brāhmaṇas. He was the author of Supadma-Vyākaraṇa. He composed Gopālacarita. He wrote commentaries on the Śiśupāla-vadha and Ānandalaharī<sup>3</sup>

Padmanabha is placed in the second half of the fourteenth and the fist quarter of the fifteenth century A.D.

MM. RATNAPATI

Son of Kaviratna of the Amarāvatī- branch of the Dariharā-family of the brāhmaņas of the Kāśyapagotra, MM. Ratnapati was married to Ratnāvatī, the sister of Bhavadeva, the maternal uncle and guru of their son, MM. Umāpati, the author of the Padārthīyadivya cakşu. MM. Umāpati is to be distinguished from his name sakes.

<sup>1.</sup> Vide p.355.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide verse No 467.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide S.N. Singh: History of Tirhut - p.155.

In the Padārthīyadivyacakşu their son Umāpati says :ratnāvatī-ratnapatyoh pitroh pūrvatapobalāt / ātanomi padārthīyam divyam cakşur umāpatih //

<sup>5.</sup> mätulabhavadevädin ätmagurun ädarad vandelibid.

<sup>6.</sup> Published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.

Umāpati of the Sāṇḍīlyagotra of the Pagaulī family, Umāpati of the Vatsagotra of the Pālī-family and others.

MM. Ratnapati is credited with the authorship of two, epics, Harivijaya and Rāmacarita. Since MM. Sivapati, the elder brother of MM. Ratnapati ordered for a copy of the Vivekodaya of MM. Ratnapati to be prepared in L.S. 429 it appears reasonable to hold that MM. Ratnapati flourished during the first half of the sixteenth century A.D.

The Harivijaya is a characteristic Sanskrit epic. Composed with great effort, this epic follows, as the poet himself says, in the foot-steps of the Śiśupālavadha of Māgha in its subject matter and method of treatment.<sup>2</sup>

The information regarding the Rāmacarita is based on the single reference made, by the poet, to it in his hitherto unpublished epic, the Harivijaya.3

Unfortunately, we have not been able to discover it.

MAHO. RĀMĀNANDA ŢHAKKURA

Mahopādhyāya Rāmānanda Thakkura a śrotriya, was the elder of the two sons of Tarkapañcānana MM. Devanātha Thakkura, the celebrated author of the saptakaumudī-s Sāvitrī was the name of his mother. Since the fist three quarters

We are greatful to Late Pandita Dhīrānanda Miśra, formerly collection pandit in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, for supplying information regarding the two epics of MM. Ratnapati.

cf. katham na ślāghantām harivijayam akrūramanaso nahat kāvyam māghapratinidhi mahāyāsavihitam / - Mithila Research Institute MS No 926.

<sup>3.</sup> cf. mamā'nyat sarvasvarh vimṛśata hi tam rāmacaritam 1.

cf. mātāpitarau vande sāvitrīdevanāthā khyau / - Rasatarangiņī - 2 (ab).

of the sixteenth century have been assigned to the literary activities of MM. Devanātha, it will not be unreasonable to place his son, Rāmānanda in the second half of the same.

On the perusal of the Rasatarangini<sup>1</sup> it becomes evident that its author, Rāmānanda, wrote at least for other works of literary value, which are all, unfortunately, lost to us. They are gītagopīśvara, Śrngāraśataka, Madana-manjari<sup>4</sup> and Kṛṣṇarahasya-candrikā.<sup>5</sup>

MM. ANIRUDDHA

MM. Aniruddha was born in the Sihaulī-branch of the Māṇḍara-family of śrotriyā-s. He was married to Devasenā, the daughter of Rāghava Jhā of the Behaṭa-branch of the Karamahā-family from his first vife. Devaseṇā was fairly senior to her step-brother, MM. Harihara, the eldest son of her step-mother, Lakṣmī. This places Aniruddha in the second half of the sixteenth century, some forty to fifty years earlier than Harihara. This is further corroborated by MM. Mohana's statement in the colophon of his Bhāvasinha-virudāvalī that his father, MM. Aniruddha, commanded the respect of Emperor Akbar.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1.</sup> Published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.

<sup>2.</sup> Four verses quoted - Nos 106, 126, 160 and 232.

<sup>3.</sup> Six verses cited Nos 134, 135, 150, 151, 161 and 186.

<sup>4.</sup> A single verse quoted No 247.

The only verse cited in No 249.

cf. iti māndarasam mahāmahopādhyāya-dillīšvara šrīmadakabbarasāhasammanitāniruddatmajamahopādhyāya mahā kavimohanaviracitā ... virudāvalī samaptā /.

The only verse of MM. Aniruddha available to us is the one preserved in the Vidyākara-sahasraka in praise of king Mānasimha<sup>1</sup> and this precluded the possibility of a correct assessment of his poetic talent.<sup>2</sup>

DIGAMBARA THAKKURA

Digambara Thakkura of the distinguished Nagavāra-branch of the ghusanta-family of the Śrotriya-s of Mithilā. This family, like the Sodarapura and Khaṇḍabalā families, has to its credit an outstanding conbribution to Sanskrit learning. In these families were born generations of scholars who possessed the coveted title of mahāmahopādhyāya. Digambara, eighth in descent from MM. Prajnākara appears to have flourished in the second half of the sixteenth and the fist quarter of the seventeenth century A.D.

Digambara composed a virudāvalī, the manuscript of which is preserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbhanga. The author has extolled his patron king Uddyotacandra of Kūrmācala (or Kumāun) to the skies. He has

<sup>1.</sup> Verse No 799.

We are indebted to R. Jha's introduction to the Sūktimuktāvalī of Harihara and U. Miśra's introduction to the Vidyākarasahasraka.

Vide 'Some forgotten litterateurs of Mithila' - a paper by the present author published in the JBRS - Vol.XLVIII pts I-IV, 1962 (pp.54-60).

MS No 11 in bundle No 292. The colophon of the ms reads:- iti śrīdigambarākhyamaithilaviracito virudāvalīnāmagranthaḥ samāptim āsasāde'ti śivam I.

eulogized the crown-prince as well. The concluding verse of the Virudāvalī¹ informs us that the author had written a drama, entitled Uṣākarabandha, but, unfortunately, it is not available. A post-colophon entry in the manuscript,² defining the nature of the viruda or panegyric literature, says that Digambara had written a work on prosody, Vṛttarahasya but that too shares the same fate as the dramatic composition of our author.

MM. RĀMEŚVARA

MM. Rāmešvara a śrotriya, was the son of Vidhupati of the Dhaoli-branch of the Sodarapura-family. He was the maternal grand-father of MM. Harihara, the author of the Sūktimuktāvalī, Prabhāvatīpariņaya etc. He was well-versed in the different branches of philosophy but his fame rested on his poetic composition, so says MM. Harihara. Unfortunately, there is no work of his available to us to enable us to evaluate his poetic personality.

This Rāmeśvara is different from his namesake to whom the authorship of the Pretavivāhapaddhati is ascribed. The latter, a student of MM. Gokulanātha, is a comparatively modern writer.

cf. sānandam kavivṛndavanditapadadvandvāravindaśriyo vacāmdhāma digambarastanujanuh śrīviṣṇudevasya yaḥ / Chandovṛttarahasyasodaramukhāsvādātimodākulā tasyo' şākara bandhanāṭakakṛtaḥ sai'ṣā kṛtir jīvatu //.

<sup>2.</sup> cf. vistarastvanu sandheyo matkṛte vṛttarahasyei.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide Süktimuktāvalī - II - 22.

MM. HARIHARA

An inhabitant of village Bittho, MM. Harihara of the Behaţa-branch of the karamahā-family of the śrotriya-s was the son of Sadupādhyāya Rāghava Jhā with his second wife Lakṣmī² and the elder brother of MM. Nilakantha, the father of MM. Rucipati. After an examination of available materials Late Pandita Ramānātha Jha, the learned editor of the Sūktimuktāvalī has fixed the age and identity of our author with meticulous care. According to him, MM. Harihara flourished in the first half of the 17th century. This corrects the views of Keith, Singh, Miśra, Bakṣã and Kaviṣekhara and finally clinches the issue.

MM. Harihara was a great poet and an accomplished dramatist. All his three works, Sūktimuktāvalī, Prabhāvatīpariņaya and Bhartrharinir veda bear testimony to it. Besides, some eighteen verses of Harihara are preserved in the anthology styled Vidyākara-sahasraka. Harihara had an

4. ibid., introduction p.18.

6. Eighteenth Century - vide History of Tirhut p.134.

Vide pp.16 and 19 of R. Jha's introduction to the Sūktimuktāvalī.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide Süktimuktavalī - XII-76.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid., 77.

End of the 15th century - vide p.248, The Sanskrit drama in its origin, development, theory and practice, 1954 edition.

Eighteenth century - vide introduction to the Vidyākarasahasraka.

First half of the 18th century - vide introduction to the Bhartrharinirvedanāţaka.

<sup>9.</sup> Eighteentth Century - vide Mithilā mihiramithilānka - p.57.

unflinching faith in the unimpeded fame that a poet attains through his poetic compositions.

The Sūktimuktāvalī<sup>2</sup> or Hariharasubhāṣita,<sup>3</sup> as it is commonly called, is an anthology of muktaka-verses composed by Harihara himself. "It is not a mere collection of subhāṣita-verse composed at random" rather "this is an inherent unity underlying the whole work" comprising twelve chapters. The late lamented Dr. Amaranātha Jhā, in his foreword to the Sūktimuktāvalī, has summarized the contents of the chapters in a single sentence. We are tempted to quote it. It is as follows:-

"The first deals with gods and goddesses; the second is concerned with children and their upbringing; the third contains words of advice to the young; the fourth is devoted to stay abroad; the fifth had verses calculated to win the patron's favour; the sixth has for its theme the manner in which royalty should be treated; politics are the subject matter of the seventh chapter; the eighth contains a description of the six seasons; the ninth concerns itself with erotic; in the tenth is an account of the different types of heroes and heroines; the eleventh is a miscellany and the last chapter sees the grown-up man back home, intent on leading a life of contemplation, - "calm of mind, all passion spent."

In addition to its poetic excellence, the Sūkti-muktāvalī has historical importance as well. It

<sup>1.</sup> vide Süktimuktāvalī - II-22(ab).

<sup>2.</sup> Edited by R. Jha, Patna, 1949.

<sup>3.</sup> Kāvyamāla - 86, NSP, 1890.

<sup>4.</sup> vide p. 25 of R. Jha's introduction.

<sup>5.</sup> ibid., foreword, p. (ii).

Poetry 25

depicts the social life of Mithilā during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Besides, it refers to Rāmeśvara - a new name in the annals of Sanskrit poets.

MM. MOHANA

MM. Mohana was the son of MM. Aniruddha Devasenā was his mother. He is placed in the first half of the seventeenth century. This stands corroborated by the fact that he enjoyed the patronage of Rājā Bhāvasimha, the son of Rājā Mānasimha.

In the Colophon of his work, entitled Bhāvasimhavirudāvalī, MM. Mohana is remembered as a mahākan. Besides this Virudāvalī, MM. Mohana has Anyoktiśataka<sup>2</sup> to his credit.

The Bhāvasihhavirudāvalī is complete in eight folios. Its palm-leaf manuscript, preserved in the K.S.D.S. University, is dated Monday, the 15th of the dark half of the month of Phalguna in the year 1670 of the Śaka era. A fine specimen of the viruda-literature, the work extolls the heroic qualities of the poet's patron.

The Anyoktiśataka is a collection of a century of verses composed as anyoktis.

The anthologies, Padyaveņī and Subhāṣitasārasamuccaya preserve twenty four verses of one Mohana or Mohana Ojhā. Of these twenty two are common in both the anthologies. Only two of the verses collected in the Subhāṣita-sārasamuccaya are not found in the Padyavenī. The verses are all erotic in native.

<sup>1.</sup> K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbhanga MS No 181.

<sup>2.</sup> Published in the Kāvyamālā NSP.

KAVĪNDRA GANGĀNANDA

In the seventeenth century in Mithilā a literateur of eminence was born, Gangnanda by name. In his Karņabhūṣaṇa he calls himself a tairabhukta (resident of Tirhut)¹ and in the Śṛṅgāravanamālā a mithilādeśavāsin (an inhabitant of Mithilādeśa).² Tradition says that he lived in village Sarisava, the village of his maternal grand father. In his Bhṛṅgadūta he calls it a grāmaratna (a jewel among villages). This village has been a seat of Sanskrit learning from the days of yore. It has produced a galaxy of Sanskrit scholars.

Gangānanda calls himself a pautrī-tanūja (son of the grand-daughter) of Bhānudatta. The panjī informs us that kavirāja Bhānudatta of the Sodarapura-family gave in marriage his grand-daughter, Sokhaitā, daughter of his eldest son, Janārdana alias Jānu to one Būḍhaba Jhā of the Baliāsa-family and Gangānanda was the youngest of the eight sons and two daughters of the couple. The maternal side of the Gangānanda was more illustrious than his paternal side and that might be the reason for his introducing himself as a bhānupautrī-tanūja. A scholar of note on the side of his father is Paṇḍitarāya (Paṇḍitarāja) Raghunandana, disciple of MM. Maheśa Thakkura. This vide verse No 143, p.112 of kavindragangānandagranathāvalī edited by the present author; published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.

<sup>2.</sup> ibid. verse No.2, page no 185.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid.

Raghunandana was the elder brother of Gangananda's father - Būḍhaba Jhā.

Gangananda was a talented poet. His poetic merit fetched for him the coveted title, kavindra. Of his six known compositions only one is a poetic composition, one dramatic and four belong to poetics.

The Bhringadūta is the lone poetic composition. It is a Khandakāvya, comprising 171 verses, in which the poet has tried to imitate the inimitable Meghaduta of Kālidāsa. As in numerous imitations of the immortal classic, usually classified under the heading dūta-kāvya, in the present work also the metre used by the poet is Mandākrāntā. In it Lord Krsna and Rādhā stand for Kālidāsa's Yaksa and Kmākhyā for Rāmagiri, Madhupuri (Mathura) for Alaka and the black-bee (bhriga) for the cloud. Here the Lord is described as employing the black-bee to carry his message to his beloved Rādhā as an emissary and we have a very beautiful and picturesque description of the black-bee's journey from kāmākhyā in Assam to Mathurā in Uttarapradeśa. Gangananda describes the route to be followed by the black-bee in all its details - all after the pattern of the Meghadūta. The cities of Vāraņasī, Prayāga and Mathurā have been described in all their grandeur. The poet's description of the lustre of the ladies of Varanasi is worthy of note.1

In the present context it may be mentioned that Gangnanda's selection of Lord Kṛṣṇa as the hero and Rādhā as the heroine of the theme is a clear indication of his Vaiṣṇava temperament.

<sup>1.</sup> vide vese No 96 (p.18).

The only available commentary on the Bhringadūta is called Rameśvaraprasādinī after the name of the late Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasimha of Darbhanga, the patron of the commentator, Cetanātha jhā of village Navaţola.

Kavīndra Gangānanda had enjoyed the patronage of king karņasimha of Bikaner, by whose orders he composed one of his works on poetics, styled Karņabhūṣaṇa.

MAHO. VAMSAMAŅI JHĀ

Mahopādhyāya Vamsamaņi jhā, son of Maho. Rāmacandra jhā and grandson of Dāmodara jhā was a Maithila Brāhmaņa belonging to Bharadvājagotra of the Sudai-branch of the Beloñcā-family. Jayamati Devī was the name of his mother. He lived in Nepal and enjoyed the patronage of king Jagajjyotirmalla of Bhaktapura. He wrote Narapatijayacaryā in Nepalese year 734, corresponding to 1614 A.D. after the accession of Jagajjyotirmalla to the throne. Besides, he also composed a fine epic in Sanskrit, entitled Śrīkṛṣṇacarita or Harikelimālākāvya. According to Dr Jayamanta Miśra, it is a fine example of unique poetic talent of the great poet. The fist half of the seventeenth century is attributed to his literary activities.

HARIDEVA MIŚRA

Harideva had the honorific title avilamba-sarasvatī prefixed to his name in the pañjī.

Published with the Bhṛṅgadūta - Raj press, Darbhanga, 1915.

<sup>2.</sup> vide Maithilī Abhilekhamālā, Patna, 1977, p.25.

Poetry 29

Son of Viśveśvara Miśra and Kumudinī Devī, Harideva was the elder brother of Raghudeva, the author of the (Shah Jehan) Virudāvalī. In the pañjī both Harideva and Raghudeva have been referred to as Śrutidharas, persons gifted with genius of retaining intact whatever is heard but once.

Harideva is credited to have composed a Virudāvalī in the praise of Emperor Jehangir (1606-1627 A.D.). The description of the beauty, valour, patience, munificence etc. of the emperor is the main aim of the poet. While eulogizing the qualities of the emperor, the poet, as usual, has taken recourse to hyperbole. The use of Anuprāsa (allideration) adds grace to the work from the beginning to the end. So for as the figures of speech pertaining to meaning is concerned, the copious use of Upamā, Utprekṣā, Rūpaka and Vyatireka enhances the poetic charm of the virudāvalī, which is, however, not of much historical interest. There is, no doubt, a very fine description of the city of Agra but it is of more peotical than historical value.

Harideva is assigned the period between 1535 and 1640 A.D.<sup>3</sup>

For further details vide Tantranātha jhā's paper "Shrutidhars" in the Journal of Bihar University - vol. I - pp.79-80, 1956; J.S. Jha's paper "History of Darbhanga Raj" - JBORS - Vol.XLVIII - Sec I - pp.28-29; U. Thakur's paper "Sanskrit Learning under the Khandabalas" ibid. sec. II. pp.101-102 and S.H. Askari's paper in proceedings of the Indian Historical Congress - 1944, p.351, foot-note 13.

Edited by Dr. Jagannatha Pathak and published in the Journal of the G.J.K. Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, vol.XXXIV - No 1-2, 1978.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid., introduction (p.3).

MM. RAGHUDEVA MIŚRA

M.M. Raghudeva Miśra has the honorific title Buddhisarasvatī prefixed to his name in the panjī. Raghudeva's mother, Kumudinī Devī was the daughter of MM. Acyuta Thakkura, son of MM. Maheśa Thakkura, the founder of the royal dynasty of the khandabalā-s in Mithilā. Raghudeva was the younger brother of Harideva. They all lived in village Jamathari, according to K.P. Jayaswal but Dr. Śaśinātha Jhā claims them his co-villagers - inhabitants of village Dīpa.<sup>2</sup>

Raghudeva was a bālakavi, a paṇḍitarāja and a śrutidhara.³ An erudite scholar gifted with poetic talent and sharp memory Raghudeva is said to have insited the court of Shah Jehan, the Emperor at Delhi in 1638 A.D. and composed his virudāvalī⁴ there. He had gone there, along with his elder brother Harideva, for a shave in the estate of the Khaṇḍabalā-royal family. They were both amply rewarded for their scholarship but were told that according to the tradition of the family a daughter's sons had no right to property in the estate of their maternal grand-father, even though he died without leaving a male issue. It is also said that the emperor conferred on them the honorfic title of Sarasvatī.

 Edited by Dr. J. Pathak and published in the Journal of the G.J.K. Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, vol.XXXIV -No 1-2, 1978.

cf. the penultimate verse of the virudāvalī.

vide introduction to Jehangivirudāvalī p.7.

cf. the colophon which reads:iti śrīmahāmahopādhyāyapanditarājaviśrutaśrutidharabālakavimaithilaśrīraghudevasarasvatīviracitā virudāvalī samapta /

One of the veses of Raghudeva is preserved in the anthology of verses compiled by Vidyākara. 1

Taking into consideration that he was removed from MM. Maheśa Thakkura by three generations and that he enjoyed the patronage of Emperor Shah Jehan, it appears reasonable to place him between the record half of the sixteenth and the fist half of the seventeenth century A.D.

The Virudāvalī<sup>2</sup> is dedicated to Sadānanda, the younger brother of the poet.<sup>3</sup> In the eulogy of the emperor the poet has composed high - sounding verses abounding in rhetorical figures like Yanuka and Anuprāsa. A commentary, styled Vibudharājiranjinī by Cakradhara Jhā of village Sāgarapura is also published with the text.

MADHUSŪDANA UPĀDHYĀYA

Madhusūdana Upādhyāya, the son of Šubhadrā and Padmanābha of Ujatī-tamily of Maithila Brāhmaṇa-s of Vatsagotra, was an inhabitant of village Satalakhā. He composed Anyopadešašataka. The second half of the seventeenth century is assigned to him.

MM. GOKULANĀTHA UPĀDHYĀYA

MM. Gokulanāthā Upādhyāya is one of the brightest stars of the galaxy of Sanskrit scholars of

<sup>1.</sup> vide verse No 449.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Kāšī, Samvat 1960.

cf. kṛtve'mām virudāvalīm iha sadānande'nije nyastavān / last foot of the last verse.

<sup>4.</sup> Published - Kāvyamālā - IX, NSP, Bombay.

Mithila. Born in the famous khanama-branch of the Phandaha-family, he was an inhabitant of village Mangarauni, near the district headquarters of Madhubani district. He was the third of the four sons of his parents. MM. Pītāmbara was his father and Uma his mother. The panji informs us that MM. Pītāmbara had the honorific title Vidyānidhi prefixed to his name. MM. Gokulanātha was the grand-son of Sadupādhyāya Rāmacandra, the great-grand-sor of Sadupadhyaya Harihara alias Nikāra and the great-great-grand-son of MM. Rucipati. The brothers of MM. Gokulanatha were also scholars of repute. The eldest, MM. Trilocana possessed the title Avilambasarasvatī; the second, Dhananjaya alias Dandapāņi was Mahāmahopādhyāya and so was the youngest, Jagaddhara alias Jagannātha. In a verse in his drama,1 entitled Amrtodaya MM. Gokulanatha refers to the high intellectual attainments of his brothers. Even the sons of MM. Gokulanātha, both of them, MM. Raghunātha and MM. Lakşmīnāthā, were noted for their scholarship. And so was his grand-son MM. Bhavānīnātha. Such was the academic glory of the family.

MM. Gokulanatha acquired proficiency in different śāstras from his father, Pītāmbara Vidyānidhi,<sup>2</sup> whom he calls a parāparabrahmamīmāmsahamāmsalavijnānavāsana,<sup>3</sup> a sakalasārasvatasamsārasaraņivibhāgavit<sup>4</sup> and a vāņīvilāsakavi.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1.</sup> vide V-24, Vijaya press, Muzaffarpur, 1925.

<sup>2.</sup> ibid., 25(a).

<sup>3.</sup> ibid., p.213.

<sup>4.</sup> ibid.

<sup>5.</sup> vide Şüktimuktāvalī of Gokulanāthā.

Prof. D.C. Bhattacharya regards MM. Gokulanāthā as "the greatest academic figure of Mithilā during the last 400 years" and laments that "unfortunately no attempt has yet made to give a complete picture of his literary achievements and property assess the value of his works, which are likely to reach three figures in total number." Definitely it is a desideratum.

A polyhistor and a prolific writer, MM. Gokulanāthā enriched nearly every branch of Sanskrit learning by his original works as well as commentaries. He was a Śarayantrī - one possessing a title indicative of an erudition of the highest calibre. This coveted title was conferred on a scholar only after qualifying in a public test in which any person present could ask any question an any branch of learning and the examinee had to satisfy every such examiner. That MM. Gokulanātha was one of the greatest intellectual stalwards of Mithilā is also corroborated by a verse composed by his pupil, Rāmeśvara, the author of the Pretavivāhapaddhatī, at the time of the death of his guru.

MM. Gokulanātha was a protegi of Phate Sāha, a Hindu king of Garhwal with his capital at Śrīnagara. he dedicated his Ekāvalī, a treatise on vide Ramānāthā Jhā's paper entitled "The declaration of a śarayantrī" published in the proceedings of the A.I.O.C. Benares Session, 1946 pp. 309-325.

<sup>1.</sup> vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā, p.193.

<sup>2.</sup> ibid.

<sup>4.</sup> cf. mātar gokulanāthanāmakagurorvāgdevi ! tubhyam namah prochāmo bhavatīm mahītalam idam tyaktvai'va yad gacchasi ! bhūloke vasatiḥ kṛtā mama gurau svarge tathā gīṣpatau pātāle phanināyaka bhagavati ! praudhiḥ kva labdhā'dhikā !!

prosody, to the king. Besides, he also composed his Sūktimuktāvalī, an āklıyāyikā containing didactic tales, with a view to instructing crown-prince Narendrasimha and prince Gopālasimha. According to Maithila tradition, while in Mithilā, Gokulanātha enjoyed the patronage of king Rāghavasimha and not that of Mahārāja Mādhavasimha, as Professor Bhattacharya inadvertently remarks. For, the latter occupied the throne of Mithilā during the period 1775-1807 and not from 1700 to 1739 AD, as the learned professor observes.

According to another tradition current in Mithilä, Gokulanātha turned down the royal request and did not join the court of Rāghavasimha or any other king of his time except Phate Sāha of Garhwal, because of the fact that he was the lone king unattacked by muslim invaders and as such had maintained the Indian culture undiluted. Besides, the Muditamadālasanātaka<sup>4</sup> was also composed by Gokulanātha at the instance of crown-prince Narendra. The period during which Gokulanātha flourished is pretty certain. For, in his Māsamīmānsā<sup>5</sup> he tells us that the year of its composition is 1631 of Śaka era, 6 which corresponds to 1709 of the christian era. And this synchronizes cf. ekāvalī phatesāha! tava kanthe Luthatva'sau // - the second half of the opening verse.

<sup>2.</sup> vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā p.195.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid.

Edited by the present author and published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1973.

Published, Vyasa press, Bhagalpur; also K.S.D.S. Univ. Darbhanga, 1981.

<sup>6.</sup> samprati hi šakābdāḥ :katrimšatşoḍašašatī, op.cit., p.18.

with the date of king Raghavasimha, who reigned from 1703 to 1739 A.D. But Gokulanatha must have adored the court of Phate Saha before this period. For, Phatesaha "died in the year 1699 A.D.". And since the authorship of seven of the works of Gokulanātha is traditionally attributed to the period of his sojourn, it does not appear unreasonable to hold, as Prof. Bhattaraya opines, that he was born "in the decade 1640-1650 A.D.". Similarly, taking into account the volume of his contribution to the advancement of the different branches of Sanskrit learning and his august presence during the reign of king Raghava simha we can safely endorse the traditional view recorded by MM. Mukunda Jhā Baksi3 that Gokulanatha died at Varanasi at the ripe age of ninety. Thus "the decade 1730-40 A.D.", assigned by Professor Bhattacharya to his death appears to be a sound judgement. Dr. Miśra, however, records a very short span of life of our author,5 but that does not seem reasonable.

Scholars are unanimous in their opinion that Gokulanātha wrote over a hundred volumes, but, unfortunately, a majority of them awaits discovery. In his introduction to the kāvyaprākāśa-vivaraņa, Kavišekhara mentions the name of thirty works of Gokulanātha. Of these the only poetical work available to us is Śivastuti, also called Śivaśataka vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithila, p.195.

<sup>2.</sup> ibid. p.193.

<sup>3.</sup> Introduction (p.1) to the Amṛtodaya.

<sup>4.</sup> vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā, p.195.

<sup>5.</sup> vide History of Maithilă literature Vol.I - p.304.

<sup>6.</sup> vide pp.16-17, published, Varanasi, 1961.

containing a century of verses calculated to offer obeisance to Lord Siva. Besides, we have his elegy on the denuse of his daughter, Kādambarī, Kādambarīkīrti-śloka by name.

MM. TRILOCANA UPĀDHYĀYA

There is a century of verses composed by Trilocana Upadhyāya, called Kedāraśataka³ in praise of Lord Kedāranātha. Our author may be identified with the elder brother of MM. Gokulanātha who mentions him as a poet.4

KAVIŚEKHARA

A scholar of Mithilā possessing the honorific title 'Kavišekhara' is the author of the Mālāvijaya-kārya, a manuscript of which is preserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University Library, Darbhanga. The author was a junior contemporary of MM. Gokulanātha and it was at his instance that the work was composed. In the colophon MM.

Published in the Kāvyamālā, Bombay 1887.

vide the present writers paper entitled "Elegies on daughter's demise by Sanskrit poets of Mithila read in A.I.O.C. - 33rd session, Calcutta, 1986.

It is reported to have been preserved in the house of Pandita Lucăi Jhā of village Pilakhawara, district Madhubani.

<sup>4.</sup> vide Amrtodaya - V-24(b).

<sup>5.</sup> Ms No 3 of the bundle No 299.

cf. haricaranāhitamatinā gokulanāthena kāritam kṛtinā // - the first half of the introductory verse.

Gokulanātha has been eulogized as an incarnation of satyayuga.1

The Mālāvijakāvya is complete in four cantos. The first is called virincisabhāvarņana; the second satyakali prasthāna; the third kali-martyāvatāra and the last śrīmadgokulanāthamahāśayavijayavilāsa. The central theme of the work is the supremacy of the Tanrika-cult over the Vaiṣṇava-cult. The manuscript is copied by one Nīlakaṇtha of the Samaula-branch of the Panicobha-family and dated Saturday, the seventh of the bright half of the month of Phalguna of the year 582 of the Lakṣmaṇa era, corresponding to 1701 A.D.

NARAPATI JHĀ

Narapati jhā of the Baliāsa-family lived in village Taraunī. He was the great-great-grand-father of MM. Parameśvara Jhā, author of the Mithilātattva-vimarśa. Narapati is said to have composed Rāghavakīrtiśataka, Gopīvallabhakāvya, Vīravirudāvalī, Hamsadūta and Prabodha candrodaya.

Since Narapati was patronized by Raghavasimha (1703-1739) he can safely be placed in the eighteenth century.

cf. iti śrīkavišekharakṛte mālāvijaye mahākāvye satyayugāvatāraśrīmadgokulanāthamahāśayavījayavlāso nāma caturthah sargah sampūrņa iti l.

cf. phālgunašuklasaptamyām šanau somapallī-šrīlapanicobhasamšrīnīlakanļhena likhitam idam pustakam la. sa. 582.

<sup>3.</sup> Published in two volumes, Darbhanga, 1949.

<sup>4.</sup> op.cit., vol. II - p.42.

The Rāghavakīrtiśataka¹ is an account of the achievements of the royal khanḍabalā-family from Cāna Thakkura to Rāghavasimha.

The Gopīvallabhakāvya² is a poetic composition dealing with the life of Lord Kṛṣṇa. MM. Parameśvara Jhā records that Narapati composed Prabodhacanidrodaya and Harisadūta in Śaka era 1625 and 1634 respectively.³ He is also credited with the authorship of Vīra-virudāvalī in praise of Hambiraśāha but the work is lost.⁴

MM. VAMŚADHARA UPĀDHYĀYA

MM. Vamsadhara alias Theghū was the son of Caturbhuja of the Rājanapurā-branch of the Dariharā-family. He lived in village Mangaraunī. He was the sister's son (bhāgineya) of MM. Gokulanātha of the illustrious Phandahū-family. He is said to have enjoyed the patronage of king Rāghavasimha (1703-1739). Since he is only one generation junior to Gokulanāthā, he would have been born in the last quotes of the seventeenth century.

One of the verses of Vamsadhara has been cited in the Vidyākarasahasraka<sup>5</sup> compiled by Vidyākara. The same verse has been quoted by his son vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilä vol. II- No 122; Mss are presented in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University Library, Darbhanga as well as with the descendants of MM. Parameśvera Jhä's nephew, Hariscandra Jhä at village Taraun vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila Vol.II - No 52; A ms of it is presented in the house of the descendents of Hariscandra jha referred to above.

<sup>3.</sup> vide Mithila-tattva-vimaša vol.II - p.42.

<sup>4.</sup> vide ibid. p.100.

<sup>5.</sup> vide verse No 565.

MM. Citradhara in the Śṛṅgārasāriṇī¹ to illustrate ābhīyogikīrati with due acknowledgement.

MM. CITRADHARA UPĀDHYĀYA

MM. Citradhara was the eldest of the four sons of his father MM. Vamsadhara. Singh2 tells us that Citradhara is traditionally assigned to nineteenth century but, after a careful examination of available data, the late lamented Dr. Sir Ganganatha iha has rightly fixed the age of MM. Sacala, the pupil and a junior contemporary of MM. Citradhara, and placed him in the eighteenth century.3 Since Citradhara was junior to Golukanāthā by two generations and Gokulanātha was born in the decade 1640-50, the birth of Citradhara can safely be assigned to the first decade of the eighteenth century A.D., if not a bit earlier. The find of a manuscript of his Vīrataranginī, dated 1674 Sake, corresponding to 1752 A.D. may also be treated as a corroborative evidence.

Among his poetic compositions the Rājastutipadya<sup>5</sup> and the Vināyakastava<sup>6</sup> have been vide verse No 43, Edited and published by the present writer, Darbhanga, 1965.

<sup>2.</sup> vide History of Tirhut, p.24.

vide his foreword to the Rasapradīpikā - commentary on the Āryāsaptašatī.

<sup>4.</sup> Edited and published by the present writer, Darbhanga, 1965. The colophon of the ms No 3 of the bundle No 5 foreserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbangha reads as follows:- sake vedamahidharalicaranaksonibhir ālaksite / et req.

<sup>5.</sup> vide p.13.

<sup>6.</sup> vide pp. 13, 15 and 17.

cited in his Vīratarangiņī but the works await discovery. Besides, five of his verses are quoted in the Vidyākarasahasraka. They include one each from the Śṛṅgārasāriṇī² and the Vīratarangiṇī³

BĀLAKAVI KŖŅADATTA

Bālakavi Kṛṣṇadatta was the son of Bhaveśa and Bhagavatī. He was born in the famous Sodarapura-family of śrotriyas of Mithilā. An inhabitant of village Ujāna, he acquired proficiency in different branches of learning in the very childhood by the grace of goddess Durgā. He started composing poems, when a boy and hence he is called Bālakavi.

He enjoyed the patronage of the Bhosla king of Nagpur - Jānujī Mahārāja (1755-1772 A.D.). He was very closely attached to Devājīpanta Coraghore, minister of the king. According to Prof. S.L. Katre Kṛṣṇadatta flourished between 1740 and 1780 A.D. but since MM. Harṣanātha Jhā, father-in-law of the late Dr. Sir Gaṅgānātha Jhā (1871-1941) calls

<sup>1.</sup> Verse Nos 520, 547, 760, 761 and 836.

Verse No 51 (same as verse No 520 of the Vidyākarasahasraka).

<sup>3.</sup> Verse No 3 (same as verse 761 of the Vidyākarasahasraka).

Vide the colophon of the commentary on the Gītagovinda: 'iti bhagavatībhaveśasambhava-kṛṣṇadatta - et seq.

cf. sodarapurakulajāta kavikṛṣṇam - Gītagopīpatikāvya - 11/26.

Udyānavāstavyasamastavidya-šrīkṛṣṇadattasya kavitvam etat / ibid. 12/28.

labdhā śaiśava eva yena sakalā vidy prasādyā'mbikā / - ibid.
 12/27.

vide his introduction to the Purañjanacarita, a drama by Kṛṣṇadatta.

Kṛṣṇadatta the maternal uncle of the maternal grand father of his mother in his commentary on the Gītagopīpatikāvya, Kṛṣṇadatta appears to have been born in the first decade of the eighteenth century A.D.

In the Gītagopīpatikāvya² Kṛṣṇadatta follows in the foot-steps of Jayadeva, the author of the Gītagovinda. The lyrics are all melodious and full of erotic sentiment. At the end of every song the author has mentioned his patron Jānujī Mahārāja. What is expressed in the songs is further corroborated by the verses interpresed in between two songs. The theme is the depiction of the love of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa.

The Lakşmiguṇamaṇimālā³ enlogizes the quality of head and heart of Lakṣmī, the consort of his patron. It is a khaṇḍakāvya, consisting of 125 verses, depicting the different facets of her personality.

There is a devotional poem composed by Kṛṣṇadatta, Caṇḍikācaritacandrikā by name. It is based on the Devīmāhātmya-portion of the Mārkaṇḍeya purāṇa delineating the emergence of goddess Durgā and Her unique feats of valour in exterminating the demons. The diction of the work is drawn largely from the source-book and the setumāhātmya- portion of the Skandapurāṇa.

cf. svamātṛmātāmahamātulena.

Edited by late Dr. Sir Ganganatha Jha with the Bhavadipika commentary by MM. Harşanatha Jha; published, Bombay, 1903.

Edited by Dr. Jagannatha Pāthaka and published by G.J. Kendriya Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, as an appendix to Kṛṣṇadatta's Jānarājacampū, Allahabad, 1978.

The Kṛṣṇalīlā of Kṛṣṇadatta is a khaṇḍa-kāvya bubbing with erote sentiment. It depicts the amorous dalliance Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. It is based on the Rāsalīlā described in the tenth skandha of Śrīmadbhāgavata. The available manuscript contains first forty four complete works and breaks off in the forty-fifth. The opening verse is in Śikhariṇī and the rest are all in Śārdūla vikrīḍita. The use of anuprāsa is charming.

In deftness of description, dextrity of diction, sweetness of similes and abundance of allitration Kṛṣṇadatta's works deserve mention. He has drawn his expression from the works of Kālidāsa, Jayadeva and Śrīharṣa but his phraseology cannot be termed as a slavish imitation of his predecessors.

Kṛṣṇadatta is said to have commented upon the Gītagovinda. His commentary is called Gaṅgā or Śaśilekhā.¹ Besides, there is a commentary by Kṛṣṇadatta on Mahimnaḥstotra as well. A commentary by one Kṛṣṇadatta on Nalodaya is entitled Sāhityadīpikā. In addition to this there is a commentary on Caurapañcāśikā by some Kṛṣṇadatta. It is not clear if they are all identical.

KHAGEŚA

Khageša šarmā had the honorific title kaviratna prefixed to his name. He lived in village Ţabhakā in Samastipur district. He is said to be a protege of land lords of Narhan estate. According to Candā Jha's verses in Kāšišivastuti Khageša lived during the reign of Mahārāja Narendra Simha (1743-1760) and so he is placed in the second half of the eighteenth century. Khageśa is credited with the authorship of Kāśiśivastuti, Šikhariŋīśataka and Kāśyabhilāṣāṣṭaka.

<sup>1.</sup> vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila vol. II No 157 and 157A.

RĀMABHADRA UPĀPĀDHYĀYA

Rāmabhadra, son of Karuṇākara Upādhyāya had composed Praśastiratna.1

MM. SACALA MIŚRA

MM. Sacala alias Bhavānīnātha Miśra was the son of Raghudeva and Rambhā of the Balirājapura-branch of the Hariama-family of the Śrotriya-s.<sup>2</sup> He was the pupil of MM. Citradhara,<sup>3</sup> the author of the Śrńgārasāriņī and the Vīratarangiņī.

MM. Sacala was an eminent jurist. He was the chief judge of Tirhut. He was famous for his sound judgement. One of judgments delivered in Sanskrit had been published by the late K.P. Jayaswal. It is dated "Tuesday, the 13th of the bright half of the month of Jyaistha of Saka 1716", which corresponds to June 10, 1794 A.D.

Besides, Peshwa Madhav Rao Narayan granted the gift of two village, Mahagavanand Salaiya, in the Jubbalpur district to MM. sacala. The gift is

Its manuscript, dated Sake 1701, corresponding to 1779
 A.D. is reported to be in the possession of Pt Vämadeva Miśra of Rewan-Pakari, Pakarī-Vasantapura, dist Sitamarhi.

cf. hariama kulajātaḥ śrotriyeşūttameşu - verse No 5 (a) of the Rasapradīpikā also jātaḥ śrīraghudevaŝarmakṛtino rambhākhyadevīsutaḥ / ibid. 4 (a b).

cf. sarvajñād iva samprāpya śrīcitradharaśarmanah / ibid. 3 (ab).

vide his paper entitled "A judgment of a Hindu court in Sanskrit" JBORS - Vol. VI - pt II - pp.246-258, 1920.

dated śāke 1710, corresponding to the 1788 of the christian era.

Furthermore, the grant of village Canoural to the same scholar by Mahārāja Mādhavasimha is dated 1779 A.D. and that of village Jagatapura by Mahārāja Pratāpa simha is dated 1771 A.D. All this, rightly, led Dr. G. Jhā to hold that MM. Sacala flourished in the eighteenth century A.D.

The only contribution of Sacala Miśra to Sanskrit Kāvya is his Rasapradīpika<sup>1</sup> - commentary on the Āryāsaptaśati. It goes a long way in unfolding the subtle nuances of meaning embodied in the verses.

Besides, three of his isolate verses are preseved in the Vidyākarasahasraka.<sup>2</sup>

MM. MOHANA MIŚRA

MM. Mohana was the younger brother of MM. Sacala. The only work of his available to us is the Rādhānayanadviśatī, a khaṇḍakāvya consisting of 217 verses in all. The poet has succeeded in presenting a very vivid and picturesque description of the eyes of enamoured Rādhā in different phases of love culminating in final cousummation of the Divine Couple. Besides, some stray verses and one Bhakti-Kalpadruma composed by Mohana are still preserved in private collection of his descendants.

In the K.S.D.S. University Library is preserved a manuscript of the girijavinodakavya3 composed by one Mohana. It is incomplete and breaks off in the sixth canto. An imitation of the gītagovinda of Jayadeva, it depicts Lord Śiva and Pārvatī in different phases of love. Herein is described the amorous story of the Divine Couple, which the poet recommends for those desirous of remission of sins to listen to. For, it is instrumental in the attainment of pure salvation. But, for want of evidence, we have not been able to fix the age and identity of the author of the girijāvinodakāvya.

Published, Darbhanga, 1931 with a foreword by the Late MM. Dr. Sir Ganganatha Jha.

<sup>2.</sup> Verse Nos 593, 813 and 819.

<sup>3.</sup> Ms No 5 in the bundle No 340.

VAIDYANĀTHA

One Vaidyanātha Maithila is said to have composed the Keśavacaritra and Tārācandrodaya at the instance of his patrons, Rājā Keśavadeva and his son Rājā Tārācandra of Multan. He is assigned to the eighteenth Century A.D. but we have not been able to fix his identity.

KALIDĀSA MIŚRA

A Kālidāsa Miśra, traditionally held to have hailed from Mithilā, composed Nalodaya, a poem in four chapters, called āśvāsa. Prajňākara Miśra son of Maho. Vidyākara Miśra wrote a commentary entitled Subodhinī on it and so Kālidāsa Miśra must have flourished earlier than Prajňākara.

cf. śrnu girīšagirīšarteh kathām-aghacayāpacayan yadi vānchari / sarasamohanamohanakalpitām-amalamuktividhāyakagītikām // - I-2.

vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila - Vol.II - poetry Nos 63, A.B.

<sup>3.</sup> vide ibid., Nos 64, A.

RAMACANDRA

We are told of one Rāmacandra, author of the Rādhāvinodakāvya traditionally called a Maithila poet. Jayaswal mentions three commentaries on it, first by Nārāyaṇa, son of Raṅganātha, second by Vidyākara Miśra, son of Ānandakara and third anonymous.

MAHO, ĀNANDAKARA

Mahopādhyāya Ānandakara was the father of Maho. Vidyākara and the grand-father of Prajñākara. He lived in village Sarisava, dist. Madhubani, whose a tank, Ānandakarī still exists to commemorate him. Late MM. Dr. U. Miśra places him in the end of the 18th century. That he was a great scholar is evident from the epilogue of Prajñākara's commentary as the Nalndayakāvya but his inclination towards poetic compositions is confirmed by the compilation of eight of his verses by his son, Vidyakara, in the Vidyākara-sahasraka.

RŪPANĀTHA

Rūpanātha was born in the second quarter of the eighteenth century A.D. His second son, Lakṣmīnātha died in Vikrama Samvat 1930 (corresponding to 1874 A.D.) at the ripe age of 88,

<sup>1.</sup> vide ibid. No 123.

<sup>2.</sup> ibid. Nos 124, A-F.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid., No 125.

<sup>4.</sup> vide Introduction to the Vidyākarasahasraka.

<sup>5.</sup> Verse Nos 326, 376, 377, 446, 788, 792, 837 and 838.

so says Candradatta, the son of Lakṣmīnatha. He further states that Rūpanātha left Mithilā and settled in Māhiṣmatī (Maṇḍal). He was a scholar of philosophy and grammar but he was an accomplished poet also. He composed the Rāmavijaya mahākavya. It is complete in nine cantos. Based on the Rāmāyaṇa, it deals with the heroic exploits of Rāma culminating in his final victory of Rāvaṇa.

MAHO. VIDYĀKARA MIŚRA

Maho. Vidyākara was the son of Maho. Ānanda-kara and the father of Prajñākara. In an introductory verse of his commentary on the Nalodaya Prajñākara refers to the erudition of his father in different branches of learning with high proficiency in logic.

Vidyākara is famous as an anthologist. His compilation, Vidyākarasahasraka, is a representative anthology of verses composed by poets, mostly hailing form Mithilā. It contains, intralia, some twenty four verses composed by Vidyākara himself. Besides, there are certain commentaries also written by him. For example, commentaries on Amaruŝataka, Rādhāvinoda, Rākṣasa-Kavya, Ŗtuvarņana and Vidagdhamukha manḍana.

PRAJŅĀKARA

Prajnākara, son of Maho. Vidyākara is the author of the Subodhinī-commentary on the

<sup>1.</sup> vide Rāmavijaya mahākāvya - introduction p.1. (foot-note).

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Sarasvati Bhawan Text No 39, Benares, 1932.

Nalodaya. Written in a perspicuous style, it explains the meaning of the verses in the traditional fashion. However, the introductory verses give us copious information regarding the academic attainments of the commentators father and grand father.

RĀMA JHA

The author of the Mithilā-tattva-vimarśa informs that one of his ancestors, Rāma Jhā, a grammarian, was born in Vikrama Samvat 1765, corresponding to 1709 A.D.<sup>2</sup> Singh tells us that a work, Meghadūta by name, is ascribed to him.<sup>3</sup> He further tells us that Rāma Jhā was the Rājapaṇḍita of Mahārāja Pratāpasimha who granted to him several villages as jagir during the period 1170-1178 fasli years, corresponding to 1763-1771 A.D.<sup>4</sup>

ROHIŅĪDATTA GOSĀÑI

Rohiṇīdatta Jha came of the Nāhasa-branch of the Khanāla-family. He lived in village Taraunī, district Darbhanga. He became a Vaiṣṇava-saint and there he became famous as Rohiṇīdatta Gosāñi. He said to have lived during the reign of Mahārāja Chatrasiṁha (1807-1839) of Mithilā. Some, however, call him a contemporary of Mahārāja Mādhavasiṁha (1775-1807). The second half of the eighteenth and the first half of the nineteenth century may be assigned ot him. The Kṛṣṇacarita, the Padyāvalī and the Praśastāvalī are his devotional poetical works.

<sup>1.</sup> Edited by Jagannatha Śukla, Calcutta, 1870.

<sup>2.</sup> vide Vol.II, p.100.

<sup>3.</sup> vide History of Tirhut p.160.

<sup>4.</sup> vide ibid. p.159.

DURGĀDATTA JHĀ

Durgādatta Jhā was an inhabitant of village Bharama. He came of the Mahisi-branch of the Budhabāla-family. He was a great grammarian. Nowadays his descendants live in village Tarauni. Since Mahārāja Chatrasimha (1807-1839) extended his patronage to Durgadatta, the beginning of the nineteenth century can safely be assigned to the priod of his literary activities. One of his poetical compositions available is Vatahvana.1 It is a collection of thirty five verses composed with a view to entreating the wind to blow. The verses begin with letters of Devanagari script from 'ka' to 'ksa' taken seriatim. It has been a popular belief that thus invoked by the recitation of similar compositions the mind blows and relieves the people of excessive heat during summer season. Besides, we have his Praśastimālā also.

RATNAPĀŅI JHĀ

Ratnapāṇi Jhā village Navānī, Tamuriā was a protege of Mahārāja Chatrasimha. He composed Padyapraśasti / Padyapraśastimālā and Praśastāvalī is praise of his patron.

MM. JĪVANĀTHA

MM. Jīvanātha alias Āmkhī Jhā was an inhabitant of village Harinagara. Born in the last quarter of the eighteenth century, he flourished during the first half of the nineteenth. His vide ibid., p.130; It is published in the Maithilapadyāvalī, Mithila Press, Madhubani, 1910.

Kṛṣṇapañcāśikā¹ is a khaṇḍakāvya being a collection of fifty verses composed with a view to offering obeisance to Lord Kṛṣṇa. They are erotic in character. They depict the love of the Divine couple culminating in their amorous dalliances. Some of the verses are very melodious and full of thought.² Jīvanātha is the author of an unpublished commentary on the Meghadūta also.

GAURĪNĀTHA JHĀ

Gaurīnāthā, son of Modanātha and grand-son of Bhaiyā of the Simaravāra-branch of the khanāla-family lived in village Sarisava. A śrotriya pupil of swāmi Viśuddhānanda Sarasvati, he wrote his only poetical work, entitled Yatīndraca-ritaprakāšikā, to perpetuate the memory of his guru. The second half of the nineteenth century A.D. is assigned to him. The Yatīndracaritaprakšikā is a fine example of artificial poetry. The verses are all written in the panktiyamaka (foot-chime) style. A single sentence is repeated four times to constitute the four feet of the verses but there is, of course, a change in the meaning. The author has also added his explanatory notes to the verses.

BĀLABODHA MIŚRA

A inhabitant of village Kokana, near corauta, Bālabodha Miśra was an erudite scholar of Mīmāmsā. For long he was a professor of Mīmāmsā in the Queen's college, Varanasi. He wrote a work on the life and attainment of Mahantha Rāmalaşaņadāsa of corauta, Rāmalaşaņa carita by name.

<sup>1.</sup> Published ibid.

<sup>2.</sup> vide verse No 43 beginning with radharomaliresa et seq.

<sup>3.</sup> For example, bhāvena bhāvaḥ paricīyate budhaiḥ, yogī janaḥ paśyati sītayāśritam etc.

LŪŢANA JHĀ

Born in the Dariharā-family, Lūţana Jhā was a grammarian. He lived in village Koilakha, dist. Madhubani. He enjoyed the patronage of Tantradhārī simha of the Khanḍabalā-family in the second half of the nineteenth century A.D. The Mithilā Research Institute, Darbhanga preserves a manuscript of his work Rasavilāsa¹ a collection of 55 verses composed in different metres. The poet has added explanatory notes. They bear testimony to the fact that the poet had a command over grammar.²

CHOTĪKAVI

There is a small kāvya, Gangānanda kallolinī<sup>3</sup> by Choṭīkavi. It enlogizes the transcendental power and exquisite beauty of the divine river Ganga. Jāyaswal records another work also composed by Choṭi Jhā. It is khanḍabalā- kularājavarnana. **

Ms No 1195. Its colophon reads as follows:iti maithila kvailakhagrāmavāsidariharayavamšodbhava śrīlūţanakṛto rasavilāsaḥ samāptaḥ /

He explains the word 'akşarapanktih' as akşe dyüte räti dadātya'kşaro dyūtavyavahāre dravyavyaya-karte 'tya' rthas tasya panktih samūhas' ca /

Ms No 6974 preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga.

<sup>4.</sup> vide Des. Cef. of mss in Mithila - II - No 34.

CANDRADATTA JHĀ

Candradatta Iha flourished in village Harinagara in the time of Mahārāja Chatrasimha (1807-1839). He composed Bhaktamāla,1 Rājāvalī,2 Kāšikāgīta, Bhaktiratnāvalī, Kṛṣṇavirudāvalī, Kāšīšivastotra, Bhagavatīstotra, Karṇagītamālām-ahākāvya and a auto-commentary on his Virudāvalī.

BHĀNUNĀTHA

Bhanunatha alias Bhana Jha was the son of MM. Dīnabandhu alias Nenana Ihā of the Sukheta-branch of the khanāla-family. He was a scholar of astrology and astronomy. He calls himself a daivajña. He enjoyed the patronage of Mahārāja Maheśvara simha (1850-1860 A.D.) He lived in village Pilakhavāra, district madhubani. He wrote Ślokaśataka. He flourished in the second half of the nineteenth century.

MM. DUHKHAMOCANA JHA

MM. Duhkhamocana Jhā alias Babuā Jhā was the son of MM. Babujana and the grand-son of MM. Dinabandhu alias Nenana Jhā of the Sukheta-branch of the Khanāla-family. Babujana was the younger brother of Bhanunatha. Therefore, the close of the nieteenth and the begining of the present century

<sup>1.</sup> Published 1882.

<sup>2.</sup> Published 1882.

<sup>3.</sup> Published 1882.

<sup>4.</sup> Preserved the state chandradhari Museum, Darbhanga.

<sup>5.</sup> Preserved ibid.

<sup>6.</sup> Vide Des. Cat. of Mss. in Mithila - II - 149 and 151.

Poetry 53

can safely be assignned to the literary compositions of Duḥkhamocana Jhā, who was junior to Bhānunātha by only one generation.

There is a century of verses composed by him, Kāvyaśataka by name. It is unpublished. The manuscript of the work is in the possession of the grand-son of the poet.

SATKAVI HEMĀNGADA

Satkavi Hemāngada composed the Gangapra bhāvakāvya. It is complete in six ullāsas. It eulogizes the majestic influence of the holy river Gangā. The age and identity of the author is not fixed. The editor places him round about 1825 A.D. and says that he appears to be a poet from Mithila<sup>1</sup>. Dr. Śaśināha Jhā traces his genealogy. He is the son of Vidyudupādhyāya and grand-son of Yaśodhora, a commentary on Kāvyaprakāśa and his time is circa 1500 A.D.

HRDAYANĀTHA MIŚRA

Hṛdayanātha Miśra, an inhabitant of village Baṭurī was a śrotriya brāhmaṇa of the Digauna-branch of the Sodarapura- family. According to the popular tradition, once he fell a prey to some fatal disease but he came round on composing his sūrya-stuti,<sup>2</sup> complete in twelve uses only. He is assigned to the nineteenth century A.D. There is one Hṛdayanātha, author of the nāndī-mukhanirupana, who flourished in the same period in Mithila. We do not know if they are identical.

Published, Viśva manīṣā, VIII and IX, 1984 and 1985.

<sup>2.</sup> Published by Vīrabhadra Miśra.

CANDĀ JHĀ

Born in 1831 A.D. Candā Jhā of the Māṇdara-family lived first in village Piṇḍārucha and later settled in village Ṭhāḍhī. He enjoyed the patronage of Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvarasiṁha (1880-1898) and Mahārājā Rameśvarasiṁha (1898-1929). His Mithilā-bhāṣā-rāmāyaṇa is a monumental work in Maithilī. His only work in Sanskrit is entitled Lakṣmīśvaravilāsa, eulogizing his patron.

HARINĀRĀYAŅA JHĀ

Harinārāyaņa Jhā was the father of Jaya ramaņa Jhā, a nonagenarian śrotriya living in village Ujāna, district Darbhanga. He had composed the Lakṣmīśvarvilāsakāvya in praise of his patron, Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvarasimha (1880-1898). It is preserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University Library Darbhanga.

mm. harşanātha jhā

Harşanātha, a śrotriya brāhmaņa of the Sakarāḍhī-family was the son of Brajanāthā and Śīlavatī. Brajanātha lived in village Dharmapura but after his death his wife Śīlavatī, along with her son, Harşanātha came to the place of her maternal uncle, Modanātha in village Śāradāpura. Harşanāthā was born in the year 1847 A.D. He was a scholar of Vide catalogus Catalogorum I - p.767(b).

Vyākaraņa, Dharmašāstra and Karmakānda. In the field of poetry we have his Śrīsarasvatī stuti and a commentary on the Gītagopīpatikāvya of Bālakavi Kṛṣṇadatta. His literary works were edited by his son, Paṇḍita Rddhinātha Jhā and published by his daughter's son, the Late Dr. Amaranātha Jhā in the form of Harṣanāthagranthāvalī. 1

Harşanātha was a courtpoet of Mahārāja Lakşmīśvarasimha (1880-1898) of the Khandabalāfamily. He died in 1898 A.D.

CETANĀTHA JHĀ

Cetanātha Jhā, a Śrotriyabrāhmaṇa of village Navaţola enjoyed the patronage of Mahārājadhirāja Rameśvavasimha (1898-1929) of the Khaṇḍabalāfamily. He composed a commentary on the Bhṛṅgadūṭa, entitled Rameśvaraprasādinī.<sup>2</sup>

MM. RĀJANĀTHA MIŚRA

MM. Rājanātha alias Rajje Miśra came of the Narasāma-branch of the Baliāsa-family of Maithila brāhmaņa-s of Kāśyapagotra. He was the son of Giridhārī. He lived in village Saurāṭha, district Madhubanī. MM. Rajje Miśra was a great scholar of Nyāya. He enjoyed the patronage of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasimha. He was the principal of the Rameśvaralatāvidyālaya, Darbhanga. He wrote the Bṛtiśavijaya, a laudatory poem felicitating king George V on his victory in World-War I. The second half of the nineteenth and first quarter of the twentieth century is assigned to him.

<sup>1.</sup> Indian Press, Prayag, 1935.

Published with the original text, Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1915.

ŚAŚIPĀLA JHĀ

Śaśipāla Jhā of village Mānechowk, district Sitamarhi was a Jyautiṣī. He also was a protege of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasimha. He composed the Devīcarita.

RAGHUNANDANA JHĀ

Raghunandana Jhā the author of the Padyanavati, a laudatory peom composed in the praise of his patron, Mahārāja-dhirāja Rameśvarasimha, was also a Jyautiṣī. He lived in village Koilakh, district Madhubani.

VĀŅIŚA JHĀ

A protege of Kāšīnareša Prabhunārāyaņasimha, Vāņīša Jhā of village Akaura composed a khaņḍakāvya on the line of the Meghaduta. It is called Cakoradūta.

JĪVANA JHĀ

Jīvana Jhā, son of Ghomghī Jhā lived in village Haripura-Baḍhaitā near Samastipur. He also enjoyed the patronage of Kāśīnareśa Prabhunārāyaṇasimha. He composed the Prabhucarita depiciting the life and attainments of his patron. He is also said to have composed the Narmadā-śataka.

MM. MUKUNDA JHĀ BAKŚĪ

***

An inhabitant of village Haripura, MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakšī was professor of Karmakāņḍa at D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He was the son of Bakśī Nandalāla alias Muśalī Jhā of the famous Karamahā-family. Mukunda immortalized his family in his khaṇḍakāvya, entitled Śrīmatkarmahā-sukulakīrtikaumuḍī.¹ He also wrote Śrīmat khaṇḍabalā kulapraśasṭi,² divided into fifteen Chapters, called Viśrāma, dealing with the origin and development of the royal khaṇḍabalā-family from early times to the age of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasimha, his patron.

MM. KRŞNASIMHATHAKKURA

MM. Kṛṣṇasimha Thakkura, son of Jagatsimha Thakkura of the illustrious khaṇḍabalā-family of Śrotriya-s was born in the year 1848 A.D. He lived in village Bhaura. He was a great grammarian gifted with a unique talent of justifying even words of foreign origin used in Sanskrit by a suitable application of Pāṇini's aphorisms. He was a great devotee and a poet also. The following stotras composed by him bear testimony to it.

- (1) Gangāśrīlaharī
- (2) Amaranāthaśataka
- (3) Tryambakapañcāśikā
- (4) Vaişņavīnavaka
- (5) Kāmākhyāstotra
- (6) Kālikātāvarņana
- (7) Tārakeśvarastotra
- (8) Kāšīvarņana

<sup>1.</sup> Published, Varanasi.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, ibid.

There is also an auto-commentary by the poet on his Amaranathasataka. In addition to these he has two more poetic works to his credit, namely, the khandabalākuladīpikā1 and the Banailīrājyavarņana, in which he has presented an account of the two flourishing royal families of Mithila - Darbhanga and Banaili respectively. Besides, we have a good number of verses composed by him on the occasion of the felicitation of George the fifth and Queen Mary, Queen Victoria and Lord Curzon, Maharaja Laksmīśvarasimha, Mahārāja of Kāšī and Rājā of Banailī. He died on October 9 in 1921 A.D.2 Ayodhyānātha Miśra, a devoted disciple of MM. Kṛṣṇasimha Thakkura, of village Canaura has written a commentary on the khandabala-kuladipika, styled Prakāśikā.3

GOPĪNĀTHASIMHA ŢHAKKURA

Gopīnāthasimha thakkura, son of Dāmodarasimhathakkura of the khandabalā-family lived in village Bhaura. He was the author of the verses, ten in number, inscribed on a talent in the temple of his family-deity, Kankālī, in his village. They describe the members of the family and the date of the completion of the temple as the renovation of the adjacent tank.

MM. PARAMEŚVARA JHĀ

MM. Parameśvara, son of Purņanātha alias

3. Published with the original text in fasli 1322.

Published, Shri Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga, Fasli 1322.

All his available works have been published under the like Samskṛtakāvyamālikā by K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga in 1987.

Bābūnātha Jhā of village Taraunī, was a scion of the Sakurī-branch of the Baliāsa-family. He was born on December 27, 1856. A court-poet of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvara-simha, MM. Parameśvara Jhā composed the Yakṣasamāgamakāvya, the Ṣtuvarṇana-Vyākhyā, the Vātāhvānakāvya, besides prose and dramatic compositions and works on rituals. In Maithilī he wrote the Mithilā-tattva-vimarśa, dealing with the history of Mithilā.

In thirtyfive verses brimming with erotic sentiment, the Yakṣasamāgamakāvya is intended to be a supplemnet to the immortal khaṇḍakāvya of Kālidāsa - the Meghadūta. The poet has depicted the re-union of the Yakṣa and the Yakṣī in a very forceful style. The Rtuvarṇana is based on the Rtusamhāra of Kālidāsa. The Vātāhvāna is more or less on the line of earlier works of the same name. There is an elegy by him on the demise of his only daughter, Satyabhāmā.<sup>2</sup>

CAKRADHARA JHĀ

Cakradhara Jhā, son of Śatrughna Jhā of village Sāgarapura was a scion of the Narona-family. While serving as a teacher in the Durgā-tripāṭhipāṭhaśālā, he composed a commentary on the Virudāvali of Raghudeva Miśra. It is called Vibudarājiraājinī.3

Published, Darbhanga, śaka era 1817. This work is referred to and discussed under the title Yakşamilanakāvya in Samskṛtake Sandeśa-kāvya by Dr. R.K. Acārya, Ajmer, 1963, pp. 134-140.

vide the present writers paper entitled Elegies on dauther's demise by Sanskrit poets of Mithilä read A.I.O.C. 33rd session, Calcutta, 1986.

Published with the Virudāvalī, Prabhakar Press, Kāšī, 1960
 Vikramasarīvat.

MAHĀVAIYĀKARAŅA DĪNABANDHU

Dīnabandhu Jhā, son of Phekū Jhā of the Sihauli-branch Māṇdara-family was an inhabitant of village Iśahapura. Born in 1878 A.D., he was a śrotriya and of the greatest grammarians of his time but, he wrote poetic works as well, namely, Rameśvara-pratāpodaya¹ and Rasikamanoranjinī.²

The Rameśvarapratāpodaya is the poetic history of the royal khanḍabalā-family in 130 verses. The first fourteen verses deal with the life and academic attainments of MM. Maheśa Thakkura, the founder of the Rāja. Then follows the descripton of kings of the family upto Lakṣmīśvarasiṁha. The last thirtyfour verses are devoted to the then reigning king, Rameśvarasiṁha.

The Rasīkamanorañjinī is a khaṇḍa-kāvya consisting of three chapters. The first, Mugdhā-prasaṅga contains 63 verses, the second Madhyā-prasaṅga comprises 87 verses and the last Pragalbhā-prasaṅga has 68 verses. The verses are all erotic in nature and they are devoted to a detailed description of the types of heroines.

Besides, he had composed Sūryastuti, Viṣṇustava, Kālīstuti, Śivastuti, songs and verses felicitating patrons of learning.3

MM. SUREŚA MIŚRA

MM. Sureśa Miśra, son of Vasanta Miśra and Published, Yajneshwar Press, Kāšī, 1902 A.D.

Published, Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga, 1912 and Nag Prakashak Delhi, 1995.

They are all published as a supplement to the Rasikamanoranjinī, Nag Prakashak, Delhi, 1995.

grand-son of Viṣṇu Miśra was an inhabitant of Viṣṇupura-Arera, district Madhubani. He was the younger brother of Naiyāyika Umeśa Miśra. Sureśa Miśra was a protege of Mahārājā-dhirāja Rameśvarasimha. Rameśvaranideśa, Maithīlamahāsabhokti and Rameśvaralatābhinadana are among his prominent poetical compositions. Some of his verses are found in his anthology entitled Maithilapadyāvalī<sup>1</sup>

LEKHANĀTHA JHĀ

Born in 1886, Lakhanātha Jhā, a śrotriya of the Simaravāra-branch of the khanāla-family of village Sarisava, enjoyed the patronage of Mahārājādhirāja Sir Kāmeśvarsimha (1929-1962) of the Khandabalāfamily. He composed poems, Varṣāharṣakāvya and Mānasapūjākāvya.

The Varṣāharṣakāvya is a small collection of verses composed by the poet depicting the rainy season in all its phases. The poet is at his best while discribing the dark clouds, the torrential rain, the lightning flashes and cool breeze specially with reference to the different forms of heroines.

Lekhanātha breathed his last in 1965

MM. BĀLAKŖŅA MIŚRA

MM. Bālakṛṣṇa Miśra, a śrotriya of the Digauna-branch of the Sodarapura-family lived in village Avaṭola, near Sarisava, district Madhubani. He was the son of Gosāñi Miśra.<sup>2</sup> Jānakī was the Published with the Rasakaustubha of Vanīdatta edited by Lekhanātha Jhā.

Vide Lakşmīśvarīcarita - introductory verse No 13.

name of his mother. He served as a Professor of Indian Philosophy at Rameśvaralatā vidyālaya, Darbhanga, Dharma Samaj Sanskrit College, Muzaffarpur and Benares Hindu University, Benaras. A philosophy poet, MM. Bālakṛṣṇa composed khaṇḍa-kāvya, Śrīrameśvarakīrtikalā, besides a commentary on the Rādhānayanadviśatī of MM. Mohana Miśra. Born in 1887 he died in 1943 A.D.

KAVIŚEKHARA BADARĪNĀTHA JHĀ

Mahāmahimopādhyāya Kavišekhara Badarīnātha Jhā of the Simaravāra-branch of the Khanuāla-family of the śrotriya-s was born on January 12, 1893. Vidyānātha was his father and Māyādevī his mother. He lived in village Sarisava. He was the representative Sāhityika of the present century - the last great poet of Mithilā. His erudition fetched for him the honorific titles, Kavišekhara and Mahāmahimopādhyāya. Among his contributions to Sanskrit poetry, the Pramodalaharī, the Rājasthānaprasthāna, the Rādhāaparinayamahākāvya, the Anyoktisāhasrī, the Kāśyapakulapraśasti, the śokaślokaśataka, the Samskṛtagītaratnāvalī and the kāvyakallolinī deserve special mention.

The Pramodalahari<sup>2</sup> is a stotra-kāvya. It contains fifty three verses.

The Rajasthanaprasthana comprises 205 verses describing the itinerory of Maharaja-dhiraja Rameśvarasimha with a view to raising funds for the establishment of the Benares Hindu University. The description of the cities and native states of Rajasthan and of the warm welcome accorded to the Mahārājādhirāja is very picturesque. The route followed by him has been viviidly described.

<sup>1.</sup> ibid. No 19.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga, 1911.

<sup>3.</sup> Published, Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1915.

The Rādhāpariṇayamahākāvya¹ is a characteristic mahākāvya, complete in twenty contos containing 2039 verses in all. The main theme of the work centres round the life and activities of Lord Kṛṣṇa culminating in the marriage and consummation of the Divine couple. The verses are fine pieces of poetry. The description of the six seasons is both lovely and lively. The last canto dealing with the amorous dalliance (rāsa-līdā) is the poet's master piece.

The Anyoktisāhasrī<sup>2</sup> comprises one thousand verses written in anyokti-style. The poetic charm of the verses is of a high order and the book reminds us of the anyokti-s of Śańkara ad Bhānudatta.

The Kāśyapakulapraśasti<sup>3</sup> presents the genealogy and family history of the poet in Sanskrit verses written in a limpid style. He has dwelt upon the life and attainments of his fore-fathers and agnates.

The Śokaślokaśataka<sup>4</sup> is an elegy in Sanskrit on the death of the father of the Nation. It consists of a century of verses brimming with pathos. The verses are characterized by a unique strikingness. The passing away of the Mahātmā has been <sup>1.</sup> Published, Vijay Press, Muzaffarpur, 1931.

Published, Master Printing Press, Kāšī, 1938.

<sup>3.</sup> Published, Vaishali Press, Muzaffarpur, 1938.

<sup>4.</sup> Published, Darbhanga Press Co., Darbhanga, 1953.

successfully depicted in a hundred modes of expression.

The Samskṛtgītaratnāvalī¹ is a collection of 101 devotional lyrics composed in different metres. Through these melodious lyrics the poet has succeeded in expressing his deepest devotion to Lord Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā.

The Kāvyakallolinī<sup>2</sup> is a compendium of isolated verses composed by Kavišekhara on different occasions. It is divided into two chapters, called taranga. The first taranga comprises 601 devotional verses offering obeisance to different gods and goddesses. The second consists of four śatakas (century of verses) They are Praśnottaramanimālā, nītišataka, Pāṭaliputrapravṛtti and chandaśśataka, The last contains 102 veses composed in 102 metres.

We would discuss the contribution of Kavišekhara to the other field of literature in the present book in their proper places.

Kavišekhara passed away on November 4, 1973.

KŞEMADHĀRĪSIMHA

Kşemadhārī Simha came of the illustrious khandabalā-family of the śrotriya-s of Mithilā.

Born in March 1894, he graduated from the Patna University in the year 1918. His scholarship of the Vedānta philosophy fetched for him the title Vedāntavinoda. He was well-versed in the Tantra and he was a poet also. His Surathacarita<sup>3</sup> bears testimoy to it. There are nineteen Sanskrit works to

<sup>1.</sup> Published, Mithila Press, Darbhanga, 1954.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1978.

<sup>3.</sup> Published by Kshemadhari Prakashan, Madhubani, 1967.

Poetry 65

his credit, on a survey of which it is evident that his contribution to the stotra-literature deserves special mention.

The Surathacarita of kṣemadhārī is a mahākāvya, complete in eighteen cantos. The poet has described life of king suratha and the glorious deeds of goddess Durgā performed for the protection of the people against the atrocities perpetrated by the demons. The story is narrated in the Devīmāhātmyaportion of the Mārkanḍeya purāṇa. He is now no more.

BADARĪNĀTHA ŢHAKKURA

Badarīnātha Ṭhakkura, son of Yadunandana Ṭhakkura of the Khaṇḍabalā-family was born in fasli year 1306. He lived in village Sarvasīma, dist. Madhubanī. A professor of Sāhitya in the Maheśvaralatāvidyapitha, Lohanā, Badarīnātha died a premature death on August 2, 1942. His only contribution is his Sanskrit commentary on the kumārasambhava of Kālidāsa.

BUDDHĪNĀTHA JHĀ

Buddhinātha Jhā, son of Pancaratha Jhā of the Mahendrapura-branch of the Paṇḍuā-family was an inhabitant of village Rāma-bhadrapura. He was a professor of Jyautiṣa in D.S. Sasnkrit College, Muzaffarpur. Tārā-laharī, Priyālāpakalāpa and Bhrātrvilāpa are among his literary compositions.

<sup>1.</sup> vide introduction to Surathacarita, p.5.

vide Candrapatikulaprašasti by Pandita Jivananda Thakkara, Darbhanga, V.S. 1999.

DEVIKĀNTA ŢHAKKURA

Devīkānta Thakkura, an inhabitant of village Athari, was the son of Jīvanātha Thakkura. He was a professor of Yoga at the D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. Devīstuti constitutes his main cotribution to Sanskrit.poetry.

VIŞŅUKĀNTA JHA

Padmavibhūşaņa Viṣṇukānta Jhā followed in the foot steps of his illustrious father, pandita Ugranātha Jhā, one of the greatest astrologers of his time. Vişnukānta Jhā was born in the Vikrama Samvat 1968. He was an inhabitant of village Baikathapura (Patna district). Vamsīdhara Jhā, one of his forefathers, had migrated to this village from his ancestral home at village Tamuria, district Madhubani. Though professionally an astrologer, Visnukānta Jhā has two literary works to his credit, Ugravanisaprasasti and Rajendraprasasti. In the former the author presents an account of his family in 219 verses. The work is named after his father. The Rajendraprasasti depicts the life and attainments of the late Dr Rajendra Prasad, the first president of India.

Vişņukānta Jhā is now no more.

ĀNANDA JHĀ

Ānanda Jhā lived in village Simhavāra, district Darbhanga. He was the son of Paṇḍita Bābūnandana Jhā. Bhagavatī was the name of his mother. He came of the Mehendrapura-branch of the Paṇḍuā-family. He was born on September 22, 1914 A.D. He expired on August 16, 1988. He was the professor and Head of the Oriental Section of the Department of Sanskrit, Lucknow University. After retirement, he served the K.S.D. University, Darbhanga as an eminent scholar. He was an outstanding scholar of Nyāya-philosophy but he was also gifted with poetic talent. The Candrāvatīcarita and Ānanḍamadhumandākinī are among his prominent poetic works.

The Candrāvatīcarita portrays the life and munificence of Rānī Candrāvatī of Banailī Raj. The first volume of the Ānandamadhumandākinī consists of three parts, namely kāvyakalloliņī, bhāvakalloliņī and vībhāvakallolinī. It contains finest poems composed by the poet in different metres. The danḍaka-s written in the praise of dasamahāvidyā-s are excellent.

ŚAŚINĀTHA JHĀ

Śaśināthā Jhā, belonging to Kāśyapagotra, came of the Rājanapurā-branch of the Dariharā-family. He lived in village Rāmṭī, district Madhubani. He was born in the last quater in 1890, of the nineteenth century to be more exact. A great philosopher of his days, he composed Anyoktisūktāvalī,² containing 269 verses of anyokti to different objects of nature. At the fag end of his life, for some years, he served as a Traditional pandit at the Mithilā Research Institute, Darbhanga. He died in 1963 A.D.

KEDĀRANĀTHA JHĀ

Kedāranātha Jhā, son of Harihara Jhā was an

<sup>1.</sup> Published, Lucknow.

Published Shri Jain-grantha Prakashan Sabha, Ahmedabad.

inhabitant of village Kaṭaiyā. He composed a small work, entitled Mithilāvarṇanakāvya in verse mixed with prose, dealing with the manners and customers of Mithilā.

KIŚORĪ JHĀ

Kiśorī Jhā, son of Lāla Jhā of village cikanauṭā, near Muzaffarpur was a professor at D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He is credited with the authorship of Bhramarāṣṭaka, in addition to commentaries on Ghaṭakarparakāvya and Bhramarānyoktipañcavihiśatikā.

ŚYĀMASUNDARA JHĀ

Šyāmasundara Jhā, son of Mathurānātha Jhā, a Śrotriya of the Pure-branch of the Narona-family lives in village Maharaila, district Madhubani. Born in the dawn of the present century, he is still very active. Rājalakṣmīcarita¹ in his only poetic composition. It is a panegyric account of Mahārānī Rājalakṣmī, the senior-most wife of the late Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvarasimha (1929-1962).

JĪVANĀTHA JHĀ

Jīvanāthā was the son of Mahāvaiyākaraņa Dīnabandhu Jhā of village Išahapura, district Madhubani. he was born in 1910 A.D. He breathed his last in 1977 A.D. His Kāmeśvarapratāpodaya² is a specimen of the Viruda-literature. it contains 125 verses. Completed in Śāke 1864,³ corresponding to Published in the Mithila Research Institute Bulletin Darbhanga.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Raj Press, Darbhanga, Samvat 2001.

<sup>3.</sup> vide concluding verse of the work.

1942 A.D., the present work is a laudatory discourse on the magnanimity of character of Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvarasimha. Written in fine Sanskrit, interspersed with choicest figures of speech, it depicts the qualities of head and heart of the Mahārājādhirāja. In it, however, the poet has made room for most of the famous bandha-s of artificial poetry.

MATINĀTHA MIŚRA

Matinātha Miśra of village Jamathari, district Madhubani, a śrotriya of the Balirājapura-branch of the Hariama-family, was born in the end of the first quarter of the present century, in 1924 A.D. He composed a mahākāvya entitled Bhārgavavikrama¹ dealing with life and attainments of Paraśurāma.

HARIKĀNTA JHĀ BAKHŚĪ

Harikānta Jhā Bakhšī of the Karamahā-family was the son of Candradhara Jhā Bakhšī and Yogamāyā Devī. An inhabitant of Haripurabakhšīţola, he was born in the first quarter of the present century. He expired about three years back. His only poetic composition is Jambū-kaśmīrasuṣamā-ratna.<sup>2</sup> It contains eighteen chapters, called Śrī. The poet has presented a picturesque description of Jammu and Kashmir in simple style.

GHŪTARA JHĀ

Paṇḍita Ghūtara Jhā, son of Paṇḍita Yadunandana Jhā, belonging to kāśyapagotra, came of the Rājanapurā-branch of the Dariharā-family. An inhabitant of village Maḍhiā, district Madhubanī, he was born in the year 1892 A.D. His only poetic composition is Chātrakalpavallī, comprisign four chapters, called pratāna. The first pratāna, entitled Ācārapratāna, contains thirtysix verses; the second, śikṣāpratāna, consists of sixty too verses; the third, Adhītipratāna, comprises sixty seven verses and the last contains only five verses. The poet died in 1945, leaving the work incomplete.

<sup>1.</sup> Published Nag Prakashan, Delhi, 1995.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Bharatiya Vidya Prakashan, Varanasi, 1988.

GANGEŚA MIŚRA

Gangeśa Miśra, son of Pandita Duhkhaharana Miśra of Haripura Bakhśitola, district Madhubani, belonged to the Narasāma-branch of the Baliāsa-family. He had composed Sūryadviśataka consisting of two hundred verses in Śārdulavikrīdika metre. It is unpublished. Born in the begnning of the present century in 1917 to be exact, Gangaśa Miśra is now no more.

GANGĀNĀTHA JHĀ

One Ganganatha Jha alias Basū a srotriya of village Naruara, district Madhubani, composed an elegy in Sanskrit at the demise of his wife.

GIRIJĀNANDA JHA

Girijānanda Jhā, son of Bauku Jhā of village Maharaila, district Madhubani, was born in the second quarter of the present century. He died in 1994. The Gītaśataka and Svātantryapūjana are his two peotic compositions.

RĀMACANDRA MIŚRA

Paṇḍita Rāmacandra Miśra of village Pakarī, district Sitamarhi was born on September 19, 1911. He died on October 5, 1994. He served D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur as a Professor of Sahitya and also, on his retirement, K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, as an eminent scholar. He is the author of a mahākāvya entitled Vaidehīcarita, dealing with the life of Sītā, He composed Smṛtirekhā, presenting a poetic account of scholars of Mithilā. His Yājāasenīmahākāvya, of which only three cantos are published, presents an account of the life of Draupadī. He composed the Tharukathā, an autobiography of a mango-tree in fine 239 sanskrit verses. The tree tells its story making revelation of man's nature with regard to nature. It is full of irony and sarcasm. His Abhinandamalā is a collection felicitatory verses composed by earlier poets.

SATYADEVA MIŚRA

Satyadeva Miśra of village Bhacchī, district Madhubanī, is the author of an epic, Ganeśasambhava, dealing with the birth of Lord Ganeśa.

Satyadeva was a great grammarian. He appears to have flourished between the second half of the

<sup>1.</sup> Published, K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, 1985.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, ibid, 1985.

Published, K.S.D.S.U. Journal Manīşā - first year No 3 to third year No 3.

<sup>4.</sup> Published, Nag Prakashan, Delhi, 1992.

<sup>5.</sup> Published K.S.D.S.U. Darbhanga, 1981.

Reported to be in the possession of Pandita Suţa Miśra, village Lālaganja, dist Madhubani.

nineteenth and the second quarter of the present century.

ŚYĀMĀNANDA JHĀ

Śyāmānanda Jhā, a śrotriya belonging to kāśyapagotra of village Lālaganja, district Madhubani, was born in 1906 A.D. He came of the Sihauli-branch of the Mandara-family. He was the son of Hemapati Jhā alias Vikala Jhā and the grand-son of Vaidika Giridhārī Jhā. He passed away in 1949 A.D. Karnikā, Madhavīthī and Vidambanā are his principal poetic compositions. The fist two are composed in the anyokti-style. Both abound in the figure of speech called Aprastuta-praśanisā. The last is full of pathos. It expresses the height of physical and mental grief, which the poet was subjected to. His Sudhāvalī,2 a pre-independence poetic work vividly describes the atrocities of the Britishers heaped on Indians. It is composed in the Pramanikametre. He is also credited with the authorship of Sevāvrata. A champion of popularizing Sanskrit, he wrote Samskṛta-Śikṣā and claimed through it a working knowledge of Sanskrit within three months. Syamananda Jha's Maithili writing have been edited by his nephew, Ramananda Jha 'Ramana' and published by the Maithili Akademi, Patna.

GAŅEŚVARA JHĀ

Gaņeśvara Jhā, son of Śiveśara Jhā, a śrotriya belonging to Vatsagotra of the Gaṅgaurā-branch of the Budhabāla-family, was born in the begining of the present century. He lived in village Lālagañja, district Madhuhani. On the demise of his first wife, Arundhatī Devī, he had composed an elegy in Sanskrit, full of pathos. He is now no more.

<sup>1.</sup> Published, Manīṣā-year 3, No 4, pp.13-17.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Viśvamanīṣā - year 4 No 1, pp.5-8.

GANGĀDHARA MIŚRA

Gaṅgādhara Miśra, son of Acyuta Miśra of Lalbag, Darbhanga, was born on April 10, 1927. He had composed a very small poem consisting of twenty seven verses only, entitled Vaṅga-bhāratavijayakāvya, dealing with the libration of Bangaladesh and India's contribution to it. He is also credited with the composition of Sītāstotra<sup>2</sup> and Gāndhī Kālajayī. He is alive and active.

BRAJANĀTHA JHĀ

Brajanātha Jhā, son of Jānakīnātha Jhā, came of the Pūre-branch of the Narona-family of Śrotriya-s of Mithilā. A inhabitant of village Maharaila, district Madhubani, he was born in 1929 A.D. The Himālayasandeśa and Gurunānakamahākāvya are his prominent poetical works. He died a premature death in 1970 A.D.

DR KĀŚĪNĀTHA MIŚRA

Emeritus Professor and Head of the Department of Sanskrit, Patna University, Patna, Dr. Kāšīnātha Miśra, a Śāstracūḍāmaṇi-scholar, was born in 1930. He is an inhabitant of village Cainapura, near Ugratārāsthāna, Seharsa district.

The Vidyāpatišataka and the Kārņāṭa-

<sup>1.</sup> Published, Bharati Press, Darbhanga, 1974.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, ibid., 1960.

<sup>3.</sup> In press.

<sup>4.</sup> Published, Janaki Prakashan, Patna-Delhi, 1992.

rājataranginī<sup>1</sup> are his two published poetical works. His Harşacaritamanjarī<sup>2</sup> is in press. The Vidyāpatišataka is a melodious poetic Sanskrit rendering of one hundred choicest Maithili lyrics of Vidyapati. The Kārnāţa-rājataranginī, composed in anuştubhmetre contains eleven chapters, called taranga. The first three taranga-s present an account of Mithila from the earliest times of the pre-karnața-period. They serve as a proloque to the main theme. The fourth deals with the exploits of Nanyadeva, the founder of the karnata-dynasty in Mithila; the fifth delineates the life and attainments of his two sons. Malladeva and Gangadeva; the sixth describes the praise worthy deeds of Narasimhadeva, son of Gangadeva; the seventh has for its theme an account of Ramasimhadeva, the eighth contains a vivid description of the visit of Tibetan Buddhist Tantric monk, Dharmasvāmī by name to Mithilā; the ninth consists of a survey of the reign of Sakrasimhadeva, son of Ramasimhadeva; the tenth has for its theme an assessment of Harisimhadeva and his council of ministers and the muslim invasion resulting in migration of Harisimhadeva to Nepal and consolidating his regal position there, followed by the reign of his three generations after him forms the subject matter of the last taranga. Thus is retold the history of the kārnāṭa-dynasty in Mithilā (1097 A.D. to 1324 A.D.) in beautiful verses characterized by poetic fancy couched in a suitable diction. The Harşacaritamañjarī is purported to present a poetic rendering of Bāṇa's famous prose-work. Dr. Miśra is engaged in research and original compositions.

<sup>1.</sup> Published Patna 1994.

<sup>2.</sup> To be published shortly.

In addition to the poets referred to above there are several others whose time is not quite certain. They have been listed below in alphabetical order:-

- Apūcha Jha An astrologer of village Koilakha, district Madhubani, he composed Kṛṣṇalīlā-padyamaṇimālā.<sup>1</sup>
- Caturbhuja Miśra (C.1650 A.D.) compiler of the Rasakalpadruma, an anthology of verses containing verses of many poets from Mithilā.
- Gumānī Author of a century of verses entitled Upadešašataka<sup>2</sup>
- Harivamsakavi Author of the Nītibhujangaprayātāvalī<sup>3</sup>
- Jayadeva Author of the Rāmagītagovinda<sup>4</sup>
- Kalyāṇa An inhabitant of village Ujāna, dist.
   Darbhanga, he is credited with the authorship of a developmental poem entitled the Gītagangādhara in the praise of Lord Šiva.
- Kāśīnāthā Author of the Yaduvamśakāvya<sup>5</sup>
- Lakhimā Thakkurāina One of a few poetesses of Mithilā. One of her verses very popula in Mithilā has an indirect reference to the sons Reported to be presented in the family of Pandita Vedananda Miśra, Rānītola.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, Kāvyamālā - II, N.S.P., Bombay.

Preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga (MS No 2360).

Edited by Dr. Prabhat Shastri, Prayag, 1974 The poet says 'śrīmadvidehanṛpadeśaviśeṣavāsaḥ'.

<sup>5.</sup> Vide History Maithili Literature - Vol. I p.223.

- of Zodiac numbered in serial order from Meşa.1
- Nenā Jhā Credited with the authorship of the Padyāvali<sup>2</sup>
- Rājanārāyana Dāsa Author of the Rājavallabha³
- Rājavallabha Author of the Uddhavadūta composed on the line of the Meghadūta.
   There is also a work entitled Rājavallabhamandana
- Rāmacandra Author of the Vāgbhūṣaṇakāvya<sup>5</sup> pertaining to a difficult philosophical theme Mokṣa (salvation)
- Rāmakavi Credited with the authorship of Pāndavadigvijaya, a gazetter written under the Rājā of Pancakoţa.
- 14. Rucikara Upādhyāya, son of Bhāukara Upādhyāya of the Gangaurā-branch of the Budhabāla-family composed Nirosthyarāma caritamahākāvya in seven cantos. Some assign him to the fifteenth century (C.1400 A.D.)

cf. her verse, which is as follows: ākrātā dašamadhvajasya gatinā sammūrchitā nirjale, turyadvādašamad- dvitīyamatimanekādašābhastanī / sāṣaṣṭhī kaṭipancamī ca navanūbhrūssaptanū varjitā prāpnotya'ṣṭamavedanām tvam adhunā tūrņamtṛtīyobhava //.

Reported to have been preserved in the house of Pandita Kesava Jha, village Dharmapura, district Madhubani.

Preserved in the K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, Ms No 4 of Bundle No 45.

Preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhaga, Ms No 4656.

<sup>5.</sup> Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila vol. II No 132.

- 15. Silhana Miśra Author of the Śātiśataka1
- Sonaphūla Upādhyāya Son of Rāmaśekhara and Manimañjarī<sup>2</sup>and grand-son of Ananta, he composed the Upadeśasamuccaya<sup>3</sup>
- Vijayagovindasimha Author of the Rājāvalī,<sup>4</sup> a poetical work dealing with the history of India in Sanskrit.

Besides all poets mentioned in the present chapter, the śākhāpañji (geneological records of different branches of families) puts on record the names of many more poets prefixing the epithets, Kavi, Sarasakavis, Kaviśckhara, Kavindra, Kavitāvidyāpāraga, and Bhāṣākavi to their names but their works are not handed down to us.

Post-script

Rāmakiśora Jhā 'Vibhākara' of village Madhurā (Dīpa) has composed Mugdhāśataka and Pitṛśokasataka. Bholānātha Miśra of Mathurādiha dist. Muzaffarpur has written Bhāratīyasarvasva, a philsosphical poem. It is published, Darbhanga 1983. Both the poets are alive.

Of the commentaries by scholars traditionally held to have hailed from Mithila, except those mentioned earlier, a metion may be made of the following commentators, who have commented upon padyakāvya-s: (In alphabetical order)

<sup>1.</sup> ibid., os 158, A-B.

cf. so'yanı chavir yasya mātā ca manimanjarī / şarvašāstraparijnātā pitā śrīrāmašekharah // Verse No 3.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila - vol II. Nos 18, 18A.

It is reported that its manuscript is in the possession of the sons of Pandita Nenamani Jhā of Bāmkī, Madhupur, district Madhubani.

1.	Bhagīratha	- on Raghuvamśa
		- on Śisupālavadha
		- on naişadhīyacaita
2.	Bhānunātha	- Vyangyavilāsinī
		on Aryasaptaśatī
3.	Bhavadatta	- Gudhārthāpadavivṛti
		on Naişadhīyacarita
		- Tattvakaumudī
		on Śiśupālavadha
4.	Bhavadeva	- on Naiṣadhīyacarita
5.	Bhīşma Miśra	- on Kumārasambhava
6.	Brhaspati Miśra	- Raghuvivekā
		on Raghuvaniśa
7.	Caturbhuja	- Tātparyavarņana
		on Mahābhārata
8.	Caturbhuja Miśra	- on Amaruśataka
9.	Citradhara	- on Śiśupālavadha
10.	Cuḍāmaņi	- on Kumārasambhava
11.	Dinakara	- on Meghadūta
12.	Divākara	- Dyotika/Vidyotikā on Meghadūta on kumārasambhava
		on Raghuvamsa
13.	Duryodhana	- Dīpikā
	Upādhyaya	on Vidagdhamukha- mandana
		- Candrikā
14.	Gaṇapati	on Caurapañcāśikā
-
15.	Guṇanātha	<ul> <li>Māghatattvasamuccaya</li> <li>on Šiśupālavadha</li> </ul>
		от этвиритичний

100
16.	Janārdana	<ul> <li>Sūktipramodikā         on Naişadhīyacarita,</li> <li>Dīpikā         on Meghadūta</li> </ul>
17.	Kṛṣṇānanda Jhā	- Bhāvārtha bodhinī on Devībhāgavata
18.	Mahādeva	- on Kirātārjunīya
19.	Mahīnātha	- on Śṛṅgāratilaka
20.	Manohara	- Bhāva vikāsana on Vāyubodha of Kedāranātha
21.	Nandalāla	- Bālabodhinī on Amaruśataka
22.	Narahari	- Dīpikā on Naiṣadhīyacarita
23.	Narasimha	- Pañjikā on Naiṣadhīyacarita
24.	Navanītarāma Miśi	ra - on Kumārasambhava
25.	Pîtāmbara	- on Gathasaptaśatī
26.	Premadhara	- on Rākṣasakāvya
27.	Rāghava	<ul> <li>on Kirātārjunīya</li> <li>on Bhaţţikāvya</li> </ul>
28.	Raghupati	<ul> <li>Vyākhyāsudhā     on Kumārasambhava</li> </ul>
29.	Rāma Upādhyāya	- on Meghadūta
30.	Rameśvarasimha	- on Kumārasambhava
31.	Rūpanātha	- on Rāmakṛṣṇavilomakāvya
32.	Śańkara	- on Durgāsaptas'atī
33.	Śavikara Miśra	- Rasamanjari/Rasasañjīvaņī on Gītagovinda
34.	Sarasvatītīrtha	- on Meghadūta

	G08505000	7747 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10
35.	Śaśidhara	- Raghuprakāśa
		on Raghuvaniśa
36.	Śrīkānta Miśra	- Padabhāvārthacandrikā
		- on Gītagovinda
37.	Śrīkanţha	- on Gītagovinda
38.	Śrīkṛṣṇa (pati) Jhā	- Anvayālāpikā on Raghuvamša,
		on Kumārasambhava
39.	Śrīnātha	- on Naişadhīyacarita
	O	on Śiśupālavadha
40	Śubhakantha	- Tippana
40.	Dublinani	on Kirātārjunīya
41.	Sukhāvasu Jhā	- Ratnamañjarī
	Sukili viisti jii	on Nalodaya
		on Śiśupālavadha
42.	Vidyāpati Miśra	- Vivarana
	viayapati imsta	on Ghajakarprakāvya

2. PROSE

The number of prose-works written in Mithilä is very small. The earliest prose-writer is MM. Vidyāpati Thakkura. The Bhūparikramā and the Puruṣaparīkṣā are his two prose-compositions.

The Bhūparikramā2 is one of the earliest works of the author earlier than the famous Puruşaparīkṣā. For, in the first chapter of the latter there is almost a verbatim reproduction of the eight tales of the former. From the corpus of the Bhūparikramā it is evident that it was designed to be divided into four parts consisting of sixtyfive tales containing descriptions of sixtyfive places of pilgrimage, but, unfortunately, only one part of the work is available. It is divided into six chapters. It comprises eight tales in all, which contain description of eight holy places only. The first four chapters contain description of one holy place each, whereas the last two of two each. The places of holy shrines are situated en route from Naimisaranya to Mithila. All the time of the composition of the work, the patron of our author, Devasimha, son of Sivasimha of the Oinwar dynasty, at whose instance the work was composed, lived at Saktipītha in the Naimiṣāraṇya. The Bhūparikramā reads like a purāņa. description of holy places of pilgrimage is designed as an integral part of the description of the expiatory journey of Balarama undertaken as a sequel to the act of killing a Brāhmaņa in the Naimişāraņya. In the lord of Drupada, Balarāma meets sage Dhaumya. The latter accompanies the former on the journey. At night he starts telling a tale to Balarāma. And this is the beginning of the Bhūparikramā.

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra pp. 2-3.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, edited by Dr. Muīśvara Jhā.

The Puruşaparīkṣā¹ is a fable. It is a collection of didactic tales written at the instance of King Śivasimha. The primary object of the book is to impart lessons of morality to boys of immature understanding. Besides, the work is also purported to be relished by cultural ladies well-versed in amorous sports.² In it the personality of the author is revealed in its entirety. His views on life and its objects are depicted here in a lucid style interspersed with instances of wit and humour. That the best work of the author is Puruṣaparīkṣā is not liable to dispute. It has a fine and interesting beginning. The element of interest, for the reader, is maitained throughout. The tales are all full of wisdom, wit and humour.

A Rsi, Subuddhi by name, starts narrating stories to king Pārāvara in the city of Candrā tapa relating to the test of man. The king is anxious to search for a suitable match for his most beautiful and accomplished daughter, Padmāvatī, who has attained the marriageable age. The Rsi, through the medium of these stories, lays down the criteria for discerning the real (and hence suitable) man from the common mass. And hence the title of the work.

The Puruşaparīkṣā is divided into four chapters, called Pariccheda. Each chapter consisting of a number of tales, seven being the minimum in the second, while fifteen the maximum in the fourth. In all the chapters there are storeis as well as counter-stories – the stories in contrast. But "inspite of its manifold merits, the Puruṣaparīkṣā has got poor poetry and faulty grammar."

Published, edited by the late Pandita Ramanatha Jha.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide introductory verse No 3.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid., verse No 9.

The Sūktimuktāvalī¹ of MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya² is a unique prose-work consisting of seven chapters containing didactic tales of citrangadā, Parjanyakanyā, Vedavatī, Madayantī, Mandodarī and others purported to instruct indirectly crown-prince Narendra Simha and prince Gopālasiṃha, son of Phate Sāha, King of Garhwal with capital at Śrīnagara.³ The tales are all aimed at raising the moral standard of the princes and inculcating religious fervour in their mind. They abound in grandiose descriptions, couched in fine prose, full of figures of speech.

MM. Parameśvara Jhā<sup>4</sup> is the author of two prose works falling in the category of ākhyāyikā. They are Kusumakalikā ākhyāyikāā<sup>5</sup> and Sīmantinī Ākhyāyikā.<sup>6</sup>

The Lakşmīśvarīcarita<sup>7</sup> of MM. Bālakṛṣṇa<sup>8</sup> is also an ākhyāyikā, complete in six ucchvāsa-s. Written in fine Sanskrit prose the work follows in the Published, Varanaseya Sanskrit University, Varanasi, 1963.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra pp.22-25.

<sup>3.</sup> cf. śrinagara vāsava iva jayati śriphate patisāhah /.

<sup>4.</sup> For details vide supra p.42.

<sup>5.</sup> Referred to in the Mithila-tattva-vimarsa p.109.

<sup>6.</sup> ibid. pp.110-111.

<sup>7.</sup> Published, Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga 1921.

<sup>8.</sup> For details vide supra pp.44-45.

foot-steps of the famous Harşacarita. The first four chapters deal with characteristic benedictory verses, verses calculated to praise the good and denounce the evil souls, verses giving the genealogy of the author, verses describing the seasons etc. along with the depiction of the early life of Mahārānī Lakṣmīśvarī, the youngest of the three wives of Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvara simha of Darbhanga. The description of Mithilā Raj from MM. Maheśa Thakkura to Lakṣmīśvarasimha is the subject matter of the fifth, while the last is solely dedicated to the life and benficence of the Mahārānī.

The prose-work is published with an auto-commentary by the author entitled Sūkş-mārthavivecikā.

Matinātha Miśra, a scholar of sanskrit at present engaged in literary activities has composed a gadyakāvya, Maharşiviśvāmitra by name.

The commentators, hailing from Mithilā, on prose-works include Jagaddhara, the author of the Tattvadīpnī on the Vāsavadattā of Subandhu, Śymasundara, the author of the Vaijayantī on the Śivarājavijaya of Ambikādatta Vyāsa and Vāsudeva, son of Devanātha on the Vāsavadattā.

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra p.51.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, ag Prakashak, Delhi, 1995.

<sup>3.</sup> For details vide supra p.4.

<sup>4.</sup> Quoted by Śivarāma o the Vāsavadattā.

<sup>5.</sup> For details vide supra p.50.

3. CAMPŪ

The Kumärabhärgavijayacampū1 is the oldest of a few available campūkāvya-s written in Mithilā. Its author was Kavirāja Bhānudatta.2 It is complete in twelve chapters, called ucchvāsa. It deals with the marriage of Siva and Parvati and the birth and heroic exploits of Kumāra Kārtikeya. It comes to a close with the description of the death of Tarakāsura. The theme of the compū is based on the Sivapurana and the Skandapurana. The campu, inter alia, gives a detailed account of the forefather of the author. The genealogical information gathered from the verse of this campū is in consonance with the pahji-records. They prove, beyond a shadow of doubt, that the present work is composed by Bhanudatta, the celebrated author of the Rasamanjari, the Rasatarangini etc.

The Campū opens with an obeisance to the Boar-icarnation of Lord Viṣṇu, at the tip of whose tusk is dancing the earth, in which the stars act as the necklace; the cloud as the forehead mark; the divine river - the Gaṅgā the garland; the moon the sport-mirror and the sun the ear-ornament. It contains picturesque descriptions of the beautiful scenes of Nature, of Kumārakārtikeya's march for conquest, of the battle-field and the pitched battle. The depiction of the home-coming of the divine commander-in-chief brimming with joy over the victory, towards the close of the book, is also worthy of note.

Published in the Kavirājabhānudatta-granthāvalī edited by the present writer, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra pp.8-11.

The benedictory verse is followed by encomium for the good and opprobrium for the bad. As a part of the description of the march for conquest one finds beautiful description of holy places like Kāšī and Prayāga. The author's deftness of vivid description is discribled in his description of Pārvatī's birth, childhood and youth. The description of Pārvatī's svayamvara is deeply influenced by the description of Indumati's svayamvara by Kālidāsa. Pārvatī sees Šiva in dream. She is enamoured of item but finding no way out to win his favour takes recourse to a very difficult form of penance. All this is in consonance with the Kumārasambhava of Kālidāsa but the ingenuity of Bhānudatta lies in getting the marriage solemnized after the bride chooses the groom in a svayamvara.

Bhānudatta is an accomplished another and so his use of choicest figures of speech both in prose and verse adds charm to the compū.

Next, in chronological order, comes the Jānarājacampū¹ by Bālakavikṛṣṇadatta² It contains more veses than prose-paragraphs. The number of the former is 305, whereas that of the latter is only 37. This campū is important both from literary and historical points of view. Its historical importance lies in a detailed description of the kings of the Bhosla-dynasty of Nagpur with special stress on the account of king Raghuji and his son Jāujī. The religious favour, munificence and bravery etc. of the Bhosla-kings have been put on records with facts and figures in this campū and this goes a long way in keeping the glory of these kings alive till present day. The ancestors of king Jānujī and his descendants, who were contemporary to Kṛṣṇadatta, have all been described in detail. This campū focusses a flood of light on the administration of the kings of the said dynasty. The mention of historical event contributes lot to the historical importance of the campū.

Published by the Ganganatha Jha Kendriya Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, 1978.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra pp.27-29.

Сатрй 87

While description the Bhosla-kings Kṛṣṇadatta, first of all, dwells upon the qualities of head and heat of Sudhāii. This is followed by the description of his son Bapoji. There after Bimba, son of Bapoji, is described. Then comes Raghujī. Raghujī's deftness in riding, archery and use of arms and ammunitions have been beautifully presented. Jānujī was his son from his first wife. He became famous as Jānarāja, the hero of the campii. Jānujī's younger brother was Sābājī. Their step brothers were Mudhājī and Bimbajī II. Raghujī got performed the marriage of his four sons and then set out for conquest. A detailed description of his conquests is of historical importance. Similarly, the heroic exploits of Janaraja also have been discussed in extenso and they are of immense historical value.

The litrary aspect of the campū is of no less importance. The apt use of the three rīti-s, the three guṇa-s and choicest śabdālaṅkāra-s and arthālaṅkāra-s proves the poetic maturity of the author. The Vīra-rasa is the predominating sentiment of the work and other rasa-s also have found their place, when circumstance have so demanded. A variety of metres has been used in the verse, the majority of which is in the Śārdūlavikrīdita. Although the author has taken due case to avoid blemishes of poetry, certain defects like Duḥśravatva, Cyutasahskāra, Kliṣṭatva and Aślīlatā have cropped up. The campū abounds in wise sayings. They are memorable. They fit in the context. Some of them are based on religion, politics and ethics, while others are general in nature. The descriptive talent of the author is at its best in the description of battles.

DHARMADATTA alias BACCA JHA

Dharmadatta alias Baccā Jhā is the author of the Sulocanāmādhava campū.¹ He was born in second half of the nineteenth century on the ninth day of the bright half of the month of Caitra in the year 1856 of the Christian era.² The late Paṇḍita Śaśinātha Jhā also opines that Baccāā Jhā was born in 1913 of the Vikrama era,³ which corresponds to 1856 A.D. but the late Paṇḍita Rāmacandra Miśra is of opinion that the great philosopher was born in 1917 Vikrama saṃvat,⁴ corresponding to 1860 A.D. Probably, on this very basis, Dr. Kāśīnātha Miśra also fixes the year of birth of the author as 1860 A.D.⁵ He passed away in 1918 A.D.

A scion of the Sakurī-branch of the Published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1973.

Vide p.2 of 'Sulocanāmādhavacampū kā samīkṣātmaka adhyayana' by Smt. Sharan Kaur.

Vide p.49 of the editorial note on the Sulocanāmādhava campū.

<sup>4.</sup> Vide p.62 of Vidvad Vibhuti.

<sup>5.</sup> Vide p.1 of introduction to the Sulocanāmādhava campū.

Campū 89

Gangautī-family, Dharmadatta alias Baccā Jhā was the son of Durgadatta alias Babulala Jha and the grand-son of MM. Baburaiya Jha. Lalitamani was the name of his mother. He adored the chair of the principal, D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He was an adept in all the branches of Indian philosophy. His literary genius finds its expression in his only voluminous campū-kāvya, Sulocanāmādhava campū by name. It has for its source the fifth and sixth adhyava-s of the Kriyayogasarakhanda of the Padmapurana, which contains the story of Sulocana and Madhava. This campū comprises thirty six ucchvāsa-s. The author has not made any vital change in the pouranic story. He has, of course, made it highly poetical. Pracesta, abductor of Sulocana, has been portrayed by the author as very faithful to Madhava with a view to presntig Sulocana as a lady of very chaste and pure character.

The prose-style of the author is influenced by Banabhatta. The use of choicest figures of speech adds charm to the prose. The use of anuprasa, utpreksä, upamä arthäntaranyäsa etc. contributes to the poetic charm of the campū. The depiction of love between Sulocana and Madhava is the theme of the work. Both the phases of śrngara-sambhoga and vipralambha have been portrayed with equal success. The latter has, however, as usual, an upper hand from the beginning to the thirty fourth ucchvasa we have the description of the height of vipralambha. The sambhoga comes towards the end, i.e., in the penultimate ucchvāsa. So far as the rīti is concerned, all the three are used in accordannce with the situation, but, considered as a whole, the campu can be treated as a composition in the Pancaliriti. So far as the use of metres is concerned almost all types of metres have probably been used by the author while composing 2498 verses of the campū. The metres are in consonance with the nature of the object of description. In the third ucchvāsa one comes across the Danḍaka-metre as well. The Campū amply proves that the author is a master-craftsman, when it comes to describe any object. His descriptive talent is worthy of note.

The Guneśvaracarita campū,2 composed by Kavišekhara Badarīnātha Jha3 comes next. This campū falls in the category of campu-s written on the life and attainments of a important personality. That personality, in the present case, is Mahārāja kumāra Guneśva rasimha. This campū is divided into four ucchvāsa-s. The first deals with the derivation of the word Mithila, its boundary, its rites, its places of pilgrimage, its holy shrines, its saints and sages, its scholars of repute and its anecdotes based on the Veda-s, the Smrti-s, the Purana-s and the epics. It is a mine of information with historical and literary importance. The second is devoted to a detailed description of kings of the khandabala-family from Mahārāja Mādhavasimha to Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvarasimha, the last king of the dynasty. The third and the fourth have for their subject matter the life and attainments of Guneśvarasimha.

The beautiful description of the autumn season in the third ucchvāsa reminds the readers of the one by Vālmīki. The life-sketch of the hero is complete and unabridged. Even the minutest details are mentioned. In due course winter and spring seasons are also described. The fourth ucchvāsa delineates the cruelty of Fate. Guṇavatī his beloved wife is dead. The depiction of pathos is very remarkable. This is followed by the marriage of Guneśvara simha a second time with a view to performing rituals according to Śāstra-s. The detailed discription of places of pilgrimage forms a part of the visit of holy shrines by Guṇeśvara-simha. An account of the books and digests composed by him is also incorporated in the work. The campū also describes his death at Vārāṇasī.

Vide pp.55-56.

<sup>2.</sup> Published Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1952.

<sup>3.</sup> For details vide supra pp.45-47.

Judged from the literary point of view, the Guneśvaracarita campū is definitely a high-class piece of literature. All the rīti-s and guna-s have been taken recourse to according to the exigency of the situation. A variety of figures of speech and a number of metres have been used. The campū contains illustrations of three varieties of Vīra-rasa-Yuddhavīra, Dānavīra and Dharmavīra.

In addition to these Campū-Kāvya-s the following are reported to have been composed by persons noted against them:-

- (a) Vidvadvilāsa Kiśorī Jhā<sup>1</sup>
- (b) Daśarathābhiśāpa campū Girijānanda Jhā²
- (c) Abhijāānamaithila campū Bunnīlāla Dāsa3
- (d) Rameśvara campū Śyāmasundara Jhā<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra p.50.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra p.52.

The mauscript is preserved in the house of the Late Pandita Ratnesvara Thakkura of village Kharaua, Tamuria, district Madhubani.

<sup>4.</sup> For details vide supra p.50.

4. DRAMA

MURĀRIMIŚRA

Murāri Miśra was the son of Vardhamāna and Tantumatī. He belonged to the Maudgalya-gotra. He is called Bālavālmīki. Ratnākara in his Haravijayamahākāvya refers to Murāri as a playwright. Jayadeva in his Prasannarāghavanāṭaka imitates Murāri's Anargharghavanāṭaka. Thus it is evident that Murāri flourished earlier than both Ratnā Kara and Jayadeva. Singh has rightly placed him "in the latter part of the eighth century A.D. or at the beginning of the ninth century A.D."

Murari is traditionally believed to be a Maithila-scholars have advanced cogent arguments to prove that the dramatist hailed from Mithilā. They have analysed the idioms and phraseology of the drama. They have enumerated the names of commentators, most of whom belonged to Mithilā. They have taken into account the presence of the dramatists description of Mithilā in a journey from Lankā en route to Ayodhyā. They have also brought to the notice of scholars that these are brāhmaṇa-s of Maudgalya gotra in Mithilā as well. The Murāripada cintā by the Paṇḍita Umānātha Jhā, the present writer's father, is an illuminating research paper. The post-graduate dissertation by Viśveśvara Jhā on Murāri is also informative. 2

Canto XXXVIII - verse 68, G.J.K.S. Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, 1983.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide II-34, VII-83.

<sup>3.</sup> History of Tirhut - p.151.

Besides the Anargharāghava, Murāri wrote the Bālacarita.3

The Anargharāghava deals with the story of Lord Rāma and Sītā. It is not upto the mark, if considered historically. It is more poetic than dramatic. "His diction is inscrutable and his ideas are far-fetched and in most cases unnatural. Anyhow he shows himself a master of scholarly reading and ready vocabulary. Viewed as classic poetry, "his work finds a middle place in the pantheon," says Singh. Chaudhary, however, refers to his "original similes, lyrical harmany", "purity of conception, delicacy of feeling and brilliancy of facts." Krishnamachariar opines "European critics have been unable to appreciate."

ŚRĪKŖŞŅA MIŚRA

Śrīkṛṣṇa Miśra is the author of an allegorical drama, Prabodhacandrodaya<sup>7</sup> by name. He calls himself a resident of Śāla-grāmatīrtha or Cakratīrtha. Dr. Umeśa Miśra is inclined to identify it with Hariharakṣetra or Hajipur.<sup>8</sup> Since the

<sup>1.</sup> Read at the XIVth session of the A.I.O.C., Darbhanga.

<sup>2.</sup> Submitted to the Mithila Research Institute Darbhanga.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide Anargharāghava - VII - 146.

<sup>4.</sup> Vide History of Tirhut p.151.

Vide Sanskrit Drama in Mithilä - Prof. R.K. Chaudhary -J.B.R.S. - XLIII - pp.34-60.

<sup>6.</sup> Vide History of classical Sanskrit Literature - pp.638 ff.

<sup>7.</sup> Published in different editions.

Vide his paper prabodhacandrodayanātaka-Kā upodghāta -J.B.R.S. - December 1953 p.436.

dramatist refers to Sindhu, Gāndhāra, Pārasīka, Magadha, Aṅga, Vaṅga, Kaliṅga, Pāncāla, Mālavā, Ābhīra and Avatī as mlecchadeśa none of these can be entertained as his native place. His contempt for Gauda, specially Rāḍhāpurī, also precludes the possibility of its being his birth-place. Probably on these very ground, Taylor calls him a Maithila. Dr. Miśra supports his thesis by showing a borrowing of a half-śloka by Śrīkṛṣṇa Miśra from Murāri Miśra, the author of the Anarghrāghava.

Since the play was staged, as Sūtradhāra informs, before Mahārāja Kīrtivarman (1049-1100), the second half of the eleventh century can safely be assigned to its composition.

MM. JAYADEVA MIŚRA alias PĪYŪŞVARŞA

MM. Jayedeva Miśra was the son of Mahādeva. Sumitrā was the name of his mother. In his works the son refers to his parents by name. He was a Śrotriya of Kauṇḍinya-gotra, says the late MM. Dr Sir Gaṅgānātha Jha. 1906. Peterson, Keith and Krishnamacharia opine that he hailed from Kuṇḍina or Kuṇḍinapura in Vidarbha (Berrar) but Jayadeva's contempt for south as expressed in his

<sup>1.</sup> Vide ibid.

J. Taylor in his introduction to his English translation of the Prabodhacandrodaya, Bombay, 1893.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide Prasannarghava - p.6 and Candrloka I - 16.

Vide his commentary on the line 'na nva 'yam pramāṇapra viņo 'pi śrūyatei' -published, Medical Hall Press, Kāšī 1906.

Vide introduction to Subhāṣitāvalī -p.37.

Vide The Sanskrit Drama in its origin, development, theory and practice - p.244.

<sup>7.</sup> Vide History of Classical Sanskrit Literature - p.645.

Drama 95

drama, Prasannarāghava<sup>1</sup> has led Paranjape<sup>2</sup> to hold that the dramatist hailed from north. Banerji Shastri and Jhā are of opinion that "he was an originaire of Mithilā" and "Peterson's remark may refers to his sojourn at Amarāvatī or Vidarbha."<sup>3</sup>

Jayedeva is remembered as Pīyuṣa varṣa (one showing nectar) because of his mellifluous verse. His melodious diction has a signular charm. He wrote a seven-act drama entitled Prasanna-rāghava, drawing its theme from the Rāmāyana. Though these are in it certain inaccuracies from the dramatic point of view, it is still considered superior to many later dramas written on the life of Rāma.*

Since the Prasannarāghava has been cited by Vallabhadeva in the Subhāṣitā-valī, compiled in 1247 A.D., Jayadeva must have flourished before that date. But he was born definitely after Ruyyaka, the author of the Alaṅkārasarvasva. For, in the Candrā loka he has reproduced Ruyyaka's definition of Vikalpālaṅkāra. Ruyyaka's pupil Maṅkhaka, author of the śrīkaṇṭhacarita was a protege of king Jayāpīḍa of Kashmir (1128-1149 A.D.). This places Pīyūṣavarṣa Jayadeva in the end of the twelfth and begining of the thirteenth century A.D. These it may be noted that Pīyuṣavarṣa was known to siṁhabhūpāla, the author of the Rasārṇavasudhākara and also to the compiler of the śārṅga dharapaddhati.

cf. 'kenā' pi dākṣiŋātyena naţāpasadena' et seq.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide introduction to the Prasannaraghava - p.XIV.

<sup>3.</sup> Vide 'A note on Pakşadhara Miśra - J.B.O.R.S. - Vol. XXIV.

<sup>4.</sup> For summary vide keith: Sanskrit Drama :- pp.244-246.

<sup>5.</sup> Vide p.68, Bombay, 1939 edition.

<sup>6.</sup> Vide III - 171.

So far as Pakṣadhara Jayadeva is concerned, he came later. There is a manuscript of the Viṣṇupurāṇa proposed by Pakṣadhara himself in L.S. 345, correspoding to the year 1464 A.D. This is also in consonace with the traditional contemporaneity of Pakṣadhara and Vidyāpati.

AMAREŚVARA alias AMAREŚA

Amareśvara alias Amareśa was the son of sāreśvara alias Sāreśa and the great grand-son of Dharmeśvara alias Dharmadatta of the Brahmapura-branch of the Dariharā-family. The Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta possesses a manuscript of his two act humorous play, entitled the Dhūrtaviḍambana. Dr. Śaśinātha Jha is engaged in editing it. He appears to have flourished in the uarter of the thirteenth and beginning of the urteenth century A.D.

VIŚEKHARĀCĀRYA JYOTIRĪŚVARA

Kavišekharācārya Jyotirīšvara Thakkura was the of Rāmešvara and the grand-son of Dhīrešvara akkura. He was the great grand-father of MM. idyāpati Thakkura, the immortal lyricist-cumscholar of Mithilā. Jyotirīšvara is said to have been a friend of king Harisimhadeva of the Kārṇātadynasty. The period between 1280 and 1340 is assigned to Jyotirīšvara. A prahasana, entitled the Dhūrtasamāgama is composed by Jyotirīšvara. It is a one-act humorous play. It was written to be staged at the celebration of the king's victory in a battle

Some call him son of Dhanesvara and grand-son of Rāmesvara.

<sup>2</sup> For the age and identity of Jyotirīśvara vide Pandita Ramānātha Jhā's paper in JBRS - XXXVII pts 3-4.

Drania 97

with a Sultan. A lovely host of, Anangasenā is the bone of contention between Durācāra and his guru Viśvanagara. Both want to keep her as a personal possession. She expresses her desire to get the dispute settled through a arbitration. The arbitrator is Asajjāti, a clever Brāhmaņa. He decides to keep the harlot with himself till the final settlement of the dispute. While she is with him the Vidusaka covets her. Mulanāśaka, the barber had advanced some money to her. He asks her to repay it. She refers him to Asajjāti who pays out of the pupil's money. Asajjāti asks the barber to shave his hairs but the cunning barber instead chains his hands and feet and leaves the place. He cries for help and the Vidūsaka comes to his rescue. Baneriee holds that another three-act prahasana, called Mundetaprahasana,1 "is also probably by the author of the Dhurtasamagama".2

With Jyotirīśvara had started an innovation in some of the Sanskrit dramas of Mithilā. In addition to the traditional use of Sanskrit and Prakrit, the local language Maithilī also found a place in dramas. In early stages the use of Maithilī was very limited but gradually, as the local audience became interested, the use of sanskrit itself began to dwindle into insignificance. At a later stage it began to be used only for stage-direction and finally the use of sanskrit was totally dropped and thus four Maithilī drama was born. Certain champions of Maithilī iterature hold the opinion that right from Dhūrtasamāgama the plays with Maithilī are all Maithilī-dramas but a section of sanskrit scholar is of the view that a few of the dramas of earlier stage in which sanskrit is predominently used should be classified under the head 'Sanskrit drama'.

<sup>1.</sup> Peterson's Report 11-122 - a work by śiva jyotirīśvara.

Vide p.91 of his contribution of Bihar to Sanskrit Literature, K.P.J. Institute, Patna, 1973.

Jyotirīśvara also composed two works on eortics - the Pañcasāyaka and the Raṅgaśckhara. In Maithilī he wrote the first prose-piece entitled Varnaratnākara.

In the Gorakṣavijayanāṭaka, Vidyāpati¹ presents a story based on the supra-natural power of the yogī-s of the Nāthasect. The play depicts how by his unique penance and haṭhayoga Gorakhanātha succeeds in getting his guru Matsyendranātha freed from the bond of Māyā. The drama abounds in songs and dances. it has the histrionic quality of a fine play.

The Manimanjari of Vidyapati is a purely sanskrit nāţikā. It was composed by the dramatist during the reign of king Sivasimha. The Erotic (Śṛṅgāra) is the dominant poetic sentiment in the play. The exquisite beauty of Manimanjari has been described by Vidyapati in fine verses. The second half of the benedictory verse is also worthy of note. Similarly, the description of the lotus-plant embraced by the rays of the morning sun is also marvellous. The plot of the drama is interesting.

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra pp.2-3.

cf. itye 'varn navasangamollasitayor dolā vilāsālasā dṛkpātāḥ śivayor abhinnavapuşor vighnam vinigh nantu vaḥ /.

cf. āślişţā karapallavena mukulavyājād vimudram mukham bāle 'vambujabāndhavena nalinī vismāpayantī sthitā / apyā 'līva samīpametya madhurārāvair dvirephāvalī manye mānavimocanāya racayatya 'syāḥ purovācikam //.

For summary there of vide introduction (pp. XXX-XXXI) to the Vidyāpatišatakam by Dr. Kāšīnātha Miśra, Janaki Prakashan, Patna - Delhi, 1992.

Drama 99

The Gauridigambaraprahasana of MM. Sankara Miśra1 is a humorous play dealing with the marriage of Siva and Pāravatī. Siva's failure in telling the father, grand-father his great-grand-father at the time of the gotrādhyāya during kanyādāna evokes laughter.2 Besides, there are other numerous instances of wit and humour in the play. While introducing the dramatist to the spectators, the nafī informs that the dramatist had already composed two dramas, Manobhava-parabhava and Krsnavinoda.3 Unfortunately, these two dramas available. The description of the spring-season and the breeze from Malaya-mountain is fine. The benedictory verse invoking smiling Digambara Siva, with his head bent down at seeing his mother-in-law Menā discard her clothes being burnt by his fire-emitting third eye, while she was performing His nīrājana at her door-step, to protect the spectators, is amusing.4

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra p.5.

<sup>2.</sup> At last Brahmā, the officiating priest gets the kanyādāna compiled with the following: "om adya gotrarahitasya pravarahīnasya pitrpitāmahaprapitāmahahīnasya ajata varņavibhāgasya anekakandarāvato himavataḥ putrīm gaurīnāmnīm imām kanyām sālankārām digambarāya gotrarahitāya nihpravarāya pitrpitāmahaprapitāmahahī nāya virūpākṣaya kapāline patnītvena tubhyam aham sampradade i".

cf. "jena kainā kanhavinodanādaam manohavaparāhavanādaam a viraiam idam pi pahasanam tena viraiam !".

cí. 'nīrājanām vidadhatīm śaśimaulimaulau tallocanānalaśikhāparidahyamānam / vāso haṭhād vijahatīm avalokya manām smerānatānanavidhuḥ sa digambaro'vyāt //".

BĀŅA KAVI

Bāṇakavi, the author of the drama Pārvatīpariṇaya¹ came of the Bhaṇḍārisama-family of Maithila brāhmaṇa-s of vatsa-gotra. Traditionally he is regarded as an inhabitant of his mūlagrāma Bhaṇḍārisama, district Darbhanga. There is a temple of goddess Bāṇeśvarī in the village. The goddess is said to have been installed by Bāṇa. Some say that during the Muslim invasion from all sides, Bāṇa's daughter, with a view to pressing her chastity, prayed the Almighty and was herself turned into an icon of stone.

This Bāṇa is quite different from his name sake, the celebrated author of the Harṣacarita and the Kādambarī. According to the Maithila tradition Bāṇakavi was a friend Vācaspati Jhā, brother of MM. Rucipati, the author of a commentary on the Anargharāghavanāṭaka of Murāri. Since Rucipati enjoyed the patronage of Mahārāja Bhairavasimha, Singh has rightly placed him in the second half of the fifteenth century<sup>2</sup> A.D.. It is said, Vācaspati composed a verse condoling the sad demise of his friend.<sup>3</sup> Some ascribe that verse to one Vidyāpati, brother of Vācaspati.

The Parvatī pariņaya is a drama containing five acts. The theme is the same as that of the Kumārasambhava. In the description of the marriage of Śiva and Pārvatī the marriage-rites of Mithilā have been dramatised. The drama is a mediocre one.

<sup>1.</sup> R. Schmidt, Leipzig, 1917.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide History of Tirhut, p.116.

Vide ibid. The verse begins with 'dvastah kāvyākhyameruḥ' et seq.

The last verse of the Virudāvalī composed by Digambara Thakkura¹tells us that he had written a drama entitled Uṣākarabandha but since it is lost we are unable to throw any light on it.

MM. Harihara<sup>2</sup> is the author of two dramas, the Bhartrharinirveda and the Prabhā vatīpariņaya. The former is the only play based on a literary character. It is based on the immense popularity of the scholar - king. it deals with the desolation of Bhartrhari by the death of his wife consequent upon the reported rumour of his own demise. By the consolation of a yogī his chagrin is changed into a state of complete indifference towards mundane affairs, so that, when recalled to life, neither his wife nor her child has any attraction for him. The play is divided itno five acts. MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakśī wrote a commentary on it. It is styled Sukhabodhinī.<sup>3</sup>

The Prabhāvatīparinaya<sup>4</sup> is a seven-act drama, depicting the love-story of Pradyumna son of Lord Kṛṣṇa and Prabhāvatī, daughter of Vajranābha, a demon. The plot is based on the adhyāya-s 21 to 27 of the Viṣṇuparvan of the Harivaniśapurāṇa. Thus the theme is puranic. All other elements of a characteristic sanskrit drama are present in it. The predominating poetic sentiment is the Erotic. The Heroic is taken recourse to in the description of Pradyumna's war with Vajranābha, in which the latter is killed. A divine she-swan, Sucimukhī by name, comes down all the way from heaven to Vajranābhapura, the city of the demon and sons

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra p.14.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra pp.15-16.

<sup>3.</sup> Published, Vidya Vilas Press, Kāšī.

<sup>4.</sup> Published Chowkhamba, Varanasī, 1969.

Drama 103

destruction." It is highly philosophical and a bit difficult to comprehend. It protrays the evils of worldly existence, it appears that the dramatist has followed in the foot-steps of Śrīkṛṣṇa Miśra, the author of the drama, entitled Prabodhacandrodaya. The first act of the Amṛtodaya is called śravaṇa-sampatti; the second mananasiddhi; the this nididhyāsandharma sampatti; the fourth ātmadarśana and the last apavargapratiṣṭhā. The dramatis personae are mostly abstract, e.g., śruti, Ānvik ṣikī, parāmarṣa, pakṣatā, śraddhā nirveda, vividiṣā etc. Patañjali, Jābāli Viduṣaka, Kañcukī and others fall in the category of concrete characters. The verses are abstruse. There is a commentary on it styled Saralā by MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakṣī. 1

The Muditamadālasanāṭaka is a drama written by MM. Gokulanātha himself, although in the beginning of the drama the Sūtradhāra calls it 'kumāraśrī narendrasāhanibaddham' (Composed by Kumāra Narendrasāhe). The kta-pratyaya in the word nibaddha is an instance of antarbhāvitanyartha (causative-sense implied therein) and as such it means 'kāritam' and not 'kṛtam'. There is not an iota of doubt regarding the authorship of the present drama. For, first, there is the similarity of technique of self-introduction by the dramatist through goddess Sarasvatī in the concluding portions of the dramas, the Amṛtodaya and the Muditamadālasa. Second verse from the latter have been quoted by the dramalist in his Kāvyaprakāśavivaraņa² with unambiguous remarkes 'yathā madīyamadālasāyām (as in my Madālasāā).

<sup>1.</sup> Published with the Muzaffarpur edition.

Vide pp.156-157 and 161; compare pp.87 and 53 of the drama.

This drama consists of seven acts. Its theme is the story of love and adventure culminating in the marriage of Madālasā, daughter of Viśvāvasu with Satyadhvaja, named Kuvalayāśva by his father king Śatrujit at the instance of sage Gālava, narrated in the Markandeyapurāņa. I

In this drama the dramatists dramatic talent finds expression in the description of the accessories of sacrifice, the terrific speech of the horse, the palace of the demon, the battle, the dream world and the like. Wit and humour find place in Medhātithi's description of the manner of riding a horse as well as his description of the courtesan in the city. And nothing can be more pathetic than the description of Viśvāvasu, a bereaved father, kissing the foot-prints of Madālasā, his daughter, with wide-stretched lips and not touching them far fear of being disfigured. Queer imagination of the dramatist in certain cases are worthy of note and so is verbal jugglery. At interests these are certain

vide adhyāya-s XXI - XXIV of the edition by Pandita Jīvānanda Vidyāsāgara, Saraswati Press, Calcutta, 1879.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide Muditamadālasa - p.25.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid. pp.19-21.

<sup>4.</sup> ibid. pp.55-56.

<sup>5.</sup> ibid. act IV.

<sup>6.</sup> ibid. p.52.

<sup>7.</sup> ibid. p.8.

<sup>8.</sup> ibid. p.11.

<sup>9.</sup> ibid. p.5 (verse No 14).

<sup>10.</sup>ibid. p.15 (verse No 27).

<sup>11.</sup>ibid. pp. 114-116 and 117-119.

verse composed in a terse style characteristic of śāstrīya-treatises. They remind the reader of the warning given by the author of the Naiṣadhīyacarita:-

'ma 'smin khalah khelatu'1

MM. JAGADDHARA alias JAGANNĀTHA

MM. Jagaddhara alias Jagannātha Upādhyāya is the younger brother of MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya. He composed a drama, entitled the Atandra-candrikā<sup>2</sup> for his patron king Phate sāha of garhwal. He was "the tenth guru of Gomdhi Miśra's school of Śarayantrin-s". Vidyākara cites three verses of Jagannatha in his anthology styled Vidyākarasahasraka. 4

The Gitadigambara<sup>5</sup> of Moho. Vamsamani Jhā<sup>6</sup> is a drama composed to be staged on the occasion of the Tulāpuruṣadāna by Pratāpamalla of Kaṭhamānḍu in 1577 of the śaka era, corresponding to 1655 A.D. The purpose behind its composition was to entertain the princes and scholars invited to witness the ceremony.

One is also reminded of the following famous Maithilī-saying: gokulanātha pihānī bhāna / pandita nothi se bujhathi sujana //.

Catalogus Catalogorum - I - p.196; a copy of the manuscript is preserved in the Patna University Library, Patna.

vide p.322 of R. Jhā's paper 'The declaration of a Śarayantrī' - A.I.O.C. XIIth session; vide also G. Jhā: Kavirahasya - pp. 73-74.

Vese Nos 396, 397 and 443.

<sup>5.</sup> Vide Cat. Cat. III - 33; H.P. Shashi - Reports I-18.

<sup>6.</sup> For details vide supra p.19.

the seed of love for Pradyumna in Prabhāvatī's heart. She hands over the portrait of the lovely and loving heroine to the hero. The hero also turns love-lorn and resolves to obtain her by all means. Sucimukhī gives Pradyumna's portrait as well to Prabhāvatī. The first three acts depict pangs of separation. Acts four to six present a picture of pleasures of union. The final union follows the death of the demon by the hero in the last act. The episodes of love-letter, the heorine being vexed by a black-bee and entry of the hero at the opportune moment remind the spectator of the Abhijñānaśakuntala.

In the final, i.e., the fifth dṛṣṭi of the Kāvyaḍākinī, solely devoted to an exposition of poetic blemishes, the author, Kavīndra gaṅgānanda,¹ while illustrating ananga-parivartana refers to a nāṭikā of his, entitled the Mandārāmañjarī.² Unfortunately, it is not available.

MM. Gokulanāthā, a polyhistor composed two dramas entitled the Amṛtodaya and the Muditamadālasa. 5

The Amrtodaya is a five-act allegorical drama describing "the progress of jiva from creation to

For details vide supra pp.17-19.

cf. "yathā mama mandāramañjaryām rājhaḥ svayam kṛtam vasantavarnanam anādṛtya vandivarnanapraśamsanam" -Kavīndragaṅgānandagranthāvalī - p.169, Edited by the present writer and published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.

<sup>3.</sup> For details vide supra pp.22-25.

Published, N.S.P., Bombay, 1897; also Vijay Press, Muzaffarpur, 1925. There is a Vārāņasī - edition as well.

<sup>5.</sup> For details of publication vide supra p.68 (Ref 130).

Drama 103

destruction." It is highly philosophical and a bit difficult to comprehend. It protrays the evils of worldly existence, it appears that the dramatist has followed in the foot-steps of Śrīkṛṣṇa Miśra, the author of the drama, entitled Prabodhacandrodaya. The first act of the Amṛtodaya is called śravaṇa-sampatti; the second mananasiddhi; the this nididhyāsandharma sampatti; the fourth ātmadarśana and the last apavargapratiṣṭhā. The dramatis personae are mostly abstract, e.g., śruti, Ānvik ṣikī, parāmarṣa, pakṣatā, śraddhā nirveda, vividiṣā etc. Patañjali, Jābāli Viduṣaka, Kancukī and others fall in the category of concrete characters. The verses are abstruse. There is a commentary on it styled Saralā by MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakšī. 1

The Muditamadālasanāṭaka is a drama written by MM. Gokulanātha himself, although in the beginning of the drama the Sūtradhāra calls it 'kumāraśrī narendrasāhanibaddham' (Composed by Kumāra Narendrasāhe). The kta-pratyaya in the word nibaddha is an instance of antarbhāvitanyartha (causative-sense implied therein) and as such it means 'kāritam' and not 'kṛtam'. There is not an iota of doubt regarding the authorship of the present drama. For, first, there is the similarity of technique of self-introduction by the dramatist through goddess Sarasvatī in the concluding portions of the dramas, the Amṛtodaya and the Muditamadālasa. Second verse from the latter have been quoted by the dramalist in his Kāvyaprakāśavivaraņa² with unambiguous remarkes 'yathā madīyamadālasāyām (as in my Madālasāā).

<sup>1.</sup> Published with the Muzaffarpur edition.

Vide pp.156-157 and 161; compare pp.87 and 53 of the drama.

This drama consists of seven acts. Its theme is the story of love and adventure culminating in the marriage of Madālasā, daughter of Viśvāvasu with Satyadhvaja, named Kuvalayāśva by his father king Śatrujit at the instance of sage Gālava, narrated in the Markanḍeyapurāṇa.¹

In this drama the dramatists dramatic talent finds expression in the description of the accessories of sacrifice, the terrific speech of the horse, the palace of the demon, the battle, the dream world and the like. Wit and humour find place in Medhātithi's description of the manner of riding a horse as well as his description of the courtesan in the city. And nothing can be more pathetic than the description of Viśvāvasu, a bereaved father, kissing the foot-prints of Madālasā, his daughter, with wide-stretched lips and not touching them far fear of being disfigured. Queer imagination of the dramatist in certain cases are worthy of note and so is verbal jugglery. At interests these are certain

vide adhyāya-s XXI - XXIV of the edition by Pandita Jīvānanda Vidyāsāgara, Saraswati Press, Calcutta, 1879.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide Muditamadalasa - p.25.

<sup>3.</sup> ibid. pp.19-21.

<sup>4.</sup> ibid. pp.55-56.

<sup>5.</sup> ibid. act IV.

<sup>6.</sup> ibid. p.52.

<sup>7.</sup> ibid. p.8.

<sup>8.</sup> ibid. p.11.

<sup>9.</sup> ibid. p.5 (verse No 14).

<sup>10.</sup>ibid. p.15 (verse No 27).

<sup>11.</sup> ibid. pp. 114-116 and 117-119.

verse composed in a terse style characteristic of śāstrīya-treatises. They remind the reader of the warning given by the author of the Naiṣadhīyacarita:-

'ma 'smin khalah khelatu'1

MM. JAGADDHARA alias JAGANNĀTHA

MM. Jagaddhara alias Jagannātha Upādhyāya is the younger brother of MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya. He composed a drama, entitled the Atandra-candrikā<sup>2</sup> for his patron king Phate sāha of garhwal. He was "the tenth guru of Gomḍhi Miśra's school of Śarayantrin-s". Vidyākara cites three verses of Jagannatha in his anthology styled Vidyākarasahasraka. 4

The Gītadigambara<sup>5</sup> of Moho. Vaṁśamaṇi Jhā<sup>6</sup> is a drama composed to be staged on the occasion of the Tulāpuruṣadāna by Pratāpamalla of Kaṭhamāṇḍu in 1577 of the śaka era, corresponding to 1655 A.D. The purpose behind its composition was to entertain the princes and scholars invited to witness the ceremony.

One is also reminded of the following famous Maithilī-saying: gokulanātha pihānī bhāna / pandita nothi se bujhathi sujana //.

Catalogus Catalogorum - I - p.196; a copy of the manuscript is preserved in the Patna University Library, Patna.

vide p.322 of R. Jhā's paper 'The declaration of a Śarayantrī' - A.I.O.C. XIIth session; vide also G. Jhā: Kavirahasya - pp. 73-74.

<sup>4.</sup> Vese Nos 396, 397 and 443.

<sup>5.</sup> Vide Cat. Cat. III - 33; H.P. Shashi - Reports I-18.

<sup>6.</sup> For details vide supra p.19.

In the seventeenth century A.D. many three-language-formula-dramas were written in which Govinda Miśra's Nalacarita based on the Mahābhārata, Rāmadāsa Jhā's four-act nāṭikā, Ānandavijaya depicting the supernatural love of the Divine Couple Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa and Devānanda's Uṣāharaṇa based on the Śrīmadbhāgavata are treated by Sanskrit scholars as Sanskrit plays and not Maithilī dramas.

In the eighteenth century A.D. Bālakavi Kṛṣṇdatta.¹ composed two dramas, namely, the Kuvalayāśvīya and the Purañjanacarita.

The Kuvalayāśvīya² is a seven-act drama based on a part of the story of Madālasā and Kuvalayāśva narrated in the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa. No vital deviation from the source has been made by the dramatist. The demon appearing in the garb of an ascetic to cheat Kuvalayāśva in the sixth act of the drama is named Dhūmaketu,³ whereas in the Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa and the Muditamadālasa of Gokulanātha he is called Tālaketu. Kṛṣṇadatta's style is simple, natural and forceful. The description of Vārāṇasī and tapovana are fine. He is very much influenced by the dramas of Kālidāsa and Bhavabhūti. At places he has not only borrowed the ideas but also their phraseology.

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra pp.27-29.

vide Mitra - Notices - vol. VI - No 2035; Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila - vol.II - No 32, incomplete copies of the ms are preserved in K.S.D.S.U. Library, Darbhanga (Bundle No 345, ms. Nos.1 and 35) and G.J.K.S. Vidyapeeth, Allahabad (No nā 5008/17).

This information is based on the summary of the sixth act of the drama published in Mitra's Notices.

The Puranjanacarita1 comprises five acts. The source of the drama is the story of Puranjana narrated in the fourth skandha of Śrīmadbhāgavata.2 From the prologue of the drama it is evident that the drama was staged in the court of Devājīpanta near the gate of Venkateśakeśava.

In both the dramas of Kṛṣṇadatta varieties of metres and figures of speech pertaining to word and meaning have been used, besides, the dramas abound in fine wise-sayings (sūkti-s) which are still remembered in Mithilā.

MM. Parameśvara Jhā (1856-1924)³ wrote a drama, styled Mahiṣāsuravadha,⁴ based on the Durgāsaptaśatī forming part of the Mārkanḍeyapurāṇa.

MM. Harşanāthā Jhā<sup>5</sup> (1847-1898) composed two five-act dramas, Uṣāharṇa and Mādhavānanda. The former depicts the story of Uṣā and Aniruddha as narrated in the Śrīmadbhāgavata. Based on the Rāsapancādhyāyī of the Śrīmadbhgavata and the Harivaniśa the latter portrays the amorous sports of the Divine Couple, Rādha and Kṛṣṇa. He also wrote two more dramas Rādhākṛṣṇamilananāṭaka, also called, Siddhāśramalīlā and Sudāmacarita.

DEVAKĪNANDANA

Maho. Devakinandana alias Mukunda alias Madhusūdana Miśra was the son of Būḍhana and

Edited by Dr. S.L. Katre, Vidarbha Samshodh Mandal, Nagpur.

<sup>2.</sup> vide adhyāya-s XXV-XXIX.

<sup>3.</sup> For details vide supra p.42.

<sup>4.</sup> vide Mithila-tattva-vimarśa - vol. II p.111.

<sup>5.</sup> For details vide supra pp.38-39.

grand-son of Abhirāma of the Hāṭī-branch of the Sodarapura-family. He was a Naiyāyika patronized by Mahārāja Maheśvara Simha (1850-1860) of the Khaṇḍabala-family and it was at his court that Devakīnandana composed his only literary work a four-act drama, Jānakī-pariṇaya¹ with the marriage of Sītā and Rāma as its theme.²

Bhānunātha composed Maithilī-cum-Sanskrit drama, Prabhāvatīharaņa by name, at the instance of his patron Mahārāja Maheśvara-simha. Like many other dramas of this type it is a mixed dramatic composition.

ŚIVANANDANA MIŚRA

Śivanandana Miśra was an inhabitant of village Debhārī. Born in 1880 A.D., he was a pupil of MM. Kṛṣṇasiṁha Thakkura and a protege of Janeśvarasiṁha of the khaṇḍabalā-family. His Gajānanacarita,³ a seven-act play is the only work of Śivanandana available to us. It depicts the valour of Lord Gaṇeśa. The chief sentiment of the play is the Heroic. The verses are all composed in a forceful style. The dialogue between Skanda and Gaṇeśa is amusing.

Śivanandana passed away in 1930 A.D.

Published, Union Press, Darbhanga, 1894.

cf. sītārāmavivāharītivalitam sindhuprabandhāmvitam / kartum svalpataram sunājakam aham sveṣļapradam prārabhe //.

A copy of the ms is preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga - Ms No 499/589. The drama has also been referred to by R.K. Chaudhary in his article published in J.B.R.S. - XLIII - pt 2 p.59.

RAVINĀTHA JHĀ

Ravinātha Jha, son of Bābūdatta Jhā came of the Rajaurā-branch of the Māṇḍara-family. He belonged to Kāśyapa-gotra. He lived in village Thāḍhī. A great grammarian of his time Ravinātha was the head of the department of grammar at D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He wrote a drama styled Arghyalambodara, depicting the life and adventures of Lord Gaṇeśa.

Devīkānta Thakkura¹ composed a drama, Mahiṣāsuravadha by name, based on the Durgā-saptaśatī.

RDDHINĀTHA JHĀ

Rddhinātha Jh, son of MM. Harşanātha Jhā of the Sakarāḍhī-family was born in 1890. He lived in village Śāradāpura, Ujāna, Darbhanga district. He passed away in 1970 A.D. He wrote five dramatic composition. They are as follows:-

- (a) Śaśikalāpariņayanāţaka2
- (b) Pūrņakāma3
- (c) Prasādanāţaka4
- (d) Dakşināmürtināţaka5
- (e) Aparapravāsanāţaka6

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra p.48.

<sup>2.</sup> Published Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1947.

Printed at Darbhanga Press Company (Pvt.) Ltd., Darbhanga in san 1368 Fasli and published by the Late Umānātha Miśra of Katihar.

The ms is preserved with Dr. Śaśinātha Jhā of K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga.

<sup>5.</sup> Preserved ibid.

<sup>6.</sup> Preserved ibid.

Of these the first two are published and the last three unpublished. The fist was written to be staged an the auspicious occasion of the Yajñopavīta of the late Kumāra Jīveśara simha, the eldest of the nephews of the late Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvarasimha. The second was composed on the occasion of the birth of a grand-son to the late Umānātha Miśra of Katihar.

The Śaśikalāparinaya is a small play in seven acts. It deals with the marriage of Śaśikalā, daugher of Subāhu with sudarśana, son of Bhāradvāja. The first act is called nāyikāhrdayagatabhāvaprakāśa; the second svasvadūtaprasthāpana; the third Kāśīprasthāna; the fourth parinayasamudyoga and the last Varaprāpti.

The Pūrṇakāma is a one-act play with the adbhuta-rasa as its principal sentiment, śṛṅgāra, hāsya, bhayānaka and karuṇa are subordinate. The play is named after the hero - Pūrṇakāma, a young sage engaged in penance. Indra, jealous by nature, sends cupid and divine damsels to disturb him. They, however, do not succeed in getting their plans executed. Indra, at last, sends Mātali to bring Pūrṇakāma to the heaven. Pūrṇakāma reaches there but completely unattached to heavenly pleasures, he engages himself in penance on the holy celestial river Mandākinī. Indra feels proud of his success and is put to trouble. In fine, Nārada and Lord Viṣṇu come and take Pūrṇakāma to Vaikunṭhadhāma.

The Prasādanāţaka contains only three acts. It deals with the struggle for independence and the role of Dr Rajendra Prasad in the freedom-movement and after independence.

The Dakṣiṇāmūrtināṭaka is a one-act play. It relates to the installation of Dakṣiṇāmūrti Siva.

The Aparapravāsanāṭaka is also a one-act play based on an imaginary plot dealing with Rāma's visit to Janakapura, his father-in-law's capital, after he ascended the throne of Ayodhyā. It is humorous.

Girijānanda Jhā<sup>1</sup> wrote a small play entitled Dvikusuma. Gangeśa Miśra<sup>2</sup> composed two dramas, Gurudakṣiṇā<sup>3</sup> and Raghucarita.<sup>4</sup> The forms comprises seven acts and deals with the story of kautsaś efforts for paying off gurudakṣinā to his guru, Varatantu. The latter is an account of the life and munificence of king Raghu.

Ānanda Jha<sup>5</sup> composed three dramatic composition:-

- (a) Hrtparivartana6
- (b) Punassangama7
- (c) Dahyaprathonmulana8

The first deals with the story of king Bhoja and his uncle Muñja. It depicts how the heart of Muñja who had sent his men to murder Bhoja, then a boy, but to usurp the throne, suddenly changed on going through the famous verse composed by Bhoja and

For details vide supra p.52.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra p.52.

<sup>3.</sup> Published, Janata Press, Madhubani 1965.

This information is reported by Pandita Candesvara Jhā, Retired Professor, Dept. of Sanskrit, L.N.M.U. Darbhanga.

<sup>5.</sup> For details vide supra p.49.

<sup>6.</sup> Published, K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga, 1984.

<sup>7.</sup> ibid., 1984.

<sup>8.</sup> ibid. 1984.

sent to Muñja for perusal. The Punassangama depicts the story of Pārvatī and Siva and the Dahyaprathonmūlana advocates the eradication of the social evil of dowry-system.

Gangadhara Miśra² has written Saptala³ - a collection of seven one-act plays.

Matinātha Miśra<sup>4</sup> has composed a five-act drama entitled Rāṣṭrabandhu<sup>5</sup> on the demolition and re-novation of the Somanātha-temple.

DR ŚAŚINĀTHA JHĀ

Dr Śaśinātha jhā of village Dūpa, district Madhubani is a teacher in the department of grammar in the K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga. Born in 1954, he is engaged in publication of unpublished and out of print texts. He has written a dramatic composition, entiled Pañjīprabandhanātaka It dramatizes the history behind the compilation of pañjī-records in Mithilā. Besides, he has written a commentary on the Pārvatīpariṇaya of Bāṇa, Subodhinī by name. He has composed Madhudhārā, a collection of verses. It is unpublished following is the list of scholar of Mithilā, in alphabetical order, who have commented upon dṛśyakāvya-s:-

<sup>1.</sup> The verse beginning with 'mandhata ca mahīpatih / etc.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra pp.54-55.

<sup>3.</sup> Published, Uday Press, Darbhanga, 1964.

<sup>4.</sup> For details vide supra p.51.

<sup>5.</sup> Published, Nag Prakashak, Delhi, 1995.

Published, K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga, 1986.

<sup>7.</sup> Published K.S.D.S.U. Darbhanga, 1986.

1.	Balabhadra	- Dīpīkā on Hanumannāṭaka
2.	Bhavanāthā Miśra 'Ayācī'
3.	Bhavāno D/o Mahārāja Dhīrasimha	- Subodhajanikā on Veņīsamhāra
4.	Chatrakara śukla	- on Anargharāghava
5.	Citradhara	- on Anargharāghava
6.	Daśaratha	- on Mālatīmādhava
7.	Dhameśvara	- on Anargharāghava
8.	Dharmananda	- on Anargharāghava
9.	Gaņeśadatta	<ul> <li>Uddhāra     on Mālatīmādhava</li> </ul>
10.	Gaṅgānātha Jhā	- Bhāvabodhinī * on Prasannarāghava
11.	Gokulanātha	- Tippaṇa on his own Muditamadālasa
12.	Graheśvara	<ul> <li>Mudrādīpikā</li> <li>on Mudrārākṣasa</li> </ul>
13.	Harihara	on Mālatīmādhava
14.	Jagaddhara	<ul> <li>on Veņisanhāra</li> <li>on Mālatīmādhava</li> <li>on Prabhāvatipariņaya</li> </ul>
15.	Jīvanāthā alias Āmkhī Jhā	<ul> <li>Vivṛti</li> <li>on Abhijñānaśakuntala</li> </ul>
16.	Kṛṣṇa	- on Anargharāghava
17.	Lakşmīdhara	- on Anargharāghava

18.	Mohanadāsa	77
	Miśra	- on Hanumannätaka
19.	Mukunda Jhā Ba
		on Amrtodaya - Sukhabodhini
		- on Bharatrhari-nirveda
		- on Anargharāghava
20.	Nānyadeva	- on Mālatīmādhava
21.	Naracandra	- on Anargharāghava
22.	Narahari Miśra	- Tippaŋī
		on Abhijñānaśakuntala
23.	Prajāpati	- on Mālatīmādhava
24.	Pṛthvīdhara	- on Mrcchakaţika
25.	Rāmacandra	- on Prasannarāghava
26.	Rāmadāsa	- on Prabodhacandrodaya
27.	Rucīkara	<ul> <li>Durnirūpaņapadārthaviveka on Prabodhacandrodaya</li> </ul>
28.	Rucinātha	- on Prabodhacandrodaya
29.	Rucipati	<ul> <li>on Anargharāghava</li> <li>on Uttararāmacarita</li> </ul>
30.	Śańkara
	S/o Vāsudeva	<ul> <li>Rasacandrikā         on Abhijāānaśakuntala</li> </ul>
31.	Śańkara	- on Anargharāghava
32.	Śaśinātha	- on Pārvatīpariņaya
33.	Tripurări	- on Mālatīmādhava
34.	Vateśvara	- Mudrāprakāsa
20000		on Mudrārākṣasa
35.	Vișņudatta	- on Anargharaghava

5. POETICS

DHARMADATTA

In his vivaraņa on the Kāvyaprakāśa MM. Gokulanātha refers to Nārāyana and quoted from Dharmadatta in support of the view that there is only one rasa and that is adbluta. This Dharmadatta is a "Mithila rasa-writer .: 2. Viśvanātha, the author of the Sāhityadarpaṇa refers to his grand-father vanquishing Dharmadatta at the court of Mahārājā Narasimhadeva of Kalinga.3 Dr. Śaśinātha Jhā has tried to prove that Dharmesvara alias Dharmadatta S/o Gangesvara of the Brahmapura-branch of the Darihara-family was the victor and not the Vanguished in the Sastrartha in the court of the said king.4 This Dharmeśvara alias Dharmadatta was, according to Dr Jha, the great grand-father of Amareśvara alias Amareśa, the author of the Dhūrtavidambana-prahasana. Professor Bhattacharya assigns 1235 A.D. to Dharmadatta, son of Vacaspati.6 Since the name of father differs the vide Introduction to the Kāvyaprakāša-viveka Vol. I - p.57.

<sup>1.</sup> vide p.144.

cf. yadāhuḥ śrīkalingabhūmandalā-khandalamahārājādhirāja śrīnarasimha sabhāyām dharmadattam sthagayantaḥ sakalasahṛdayagoṣṭhīgariṣṭhakavipanditā smatpitāmaheśrīmannārāyanadāsa pādāḥ"

<sup>4.</sup> vide his paper in Samskṛtasammelana dated 31.3.1994.

<sup>5.</sup> vide supra p.91.

vide his paper, entitled "Visvanathakavirāja and his references to some forgotten ālankārika-s" published in the Journal of Oriental Institute, vol. III - No 4 pp.357-365.

identity appears to be doubted. Dharmadatta is also cited in the Rasapradīpa of Prabhākara composed in 1583 A.D.<sup>1</sup>

This thirteenth century writer of Mithila on poetics is the earliest known to us. Unfortunately, we have not been able to discover his work.

SIMHABHŪPĀLA

Simhabhūpāla flourished in the fourteenth century. He composed a short treatise on poetics, Rasārņavasudhākara by name. In all his commentaries Mallināthā has cited from it. Another work of Simhabhūpāla relates to Music. It is called Vyākhyā-saṅgīta, a commentary on the Saṅgītaratnākara of Śārṅgadeva. Miśra identifies him with Bhūpālasimha, a Maithila king of the Kārņāṭa-family.² Regarding Rasārņa vasudhākara Prof. Bhattacharya maintains that it is "very likely a compilation of Mithilā."³ In Mithilā, we have Maithilī songs composed by simhabhūpati or Simhabhūpāla. Kamaleśa is of opinion that it was Śivasimha who compiled the two works assuming the name Simhabhūpala.

The Candrāloka<sup>4</sup> of Pīyuşavarşa Jayadeva<sup>5</sup> is divided into ten chapters, called Mayūkha. All the topics pertaining to poetics have been discussed in a very simple language. The first half of the verses

<sup>1.</sup> S.K. De: History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.216.

<sup>2.</sup> History of Maithili Literature - Vol.I - p.242.

vide his paper in the Journal of Oriental Institute - vol. VIII - No 4.

<sup>4.</sup> Published, N.S.P. Bombay, 1915.

<sup>5.</sup> For details vide supra pp.90-91.

Poetics 117

are definitions and the second half are illustrations thereof.

MM. GOVINDA THAKKURA

MM. Govinda Thakkura, was the eldest of the three sons of MM. Keśava Thakkura by his first wife, Sono. He was younger than Rucikara, the elder of the two sons of Keśava by his second wife. Rucikara loved Govinda much¹ and the latter learnt the quintessence of the kāvya-sāhitya from the former.

MM. Govinda's father, MM. Kesava was the son of MM. Buddhikara and the grand-son of MM. Ravikara of the Nagavāra-branch of the illustrious Ghusauta-family of the Śrotriya-s of Mithilā. This family like the Sodarapurā and Khandabala-families has the unique distinction of producing generations of Sanskrit scholars of note.

The Kāvyapradīpa of MM. Govinda, though a commentary on the kāvyapvakāśa of Mammaţa, is adjudged, by scholars, an independent epoch making work in the annals of Sanskrit poetics. Govinda is an ālankārika of high order. It is erudition in rhetoric discipline has rightly been eulogized by MM. Devanātha in his Kāvyakaumudī. Govinda was a versatile genius. His son, MM. Devanāthā, in his cf. ya eşa kurute mano vipadi gauravinām girām sa vāmana ivāmbare harinalānchanam vānchasi / lilakhişati simhikāramanakesaram Pheruvat patanga iva pāvakam nṛhariśā vakam dhāvati //.

<sup>1.</sup> vide kāvyapradīpa - verse No 1 (ab).

Mantrakaumudī<sup>1</sup> calls him 'mīmāmsāguru',<sup>2</sup> Vedāntasiddhāntavācaspati<sup>3</sup> and sakalatantrasarojabhāsvān.<sup>4</sup> In the realm of Nyāya he is said to have surpassed even the great Ācārya, Udayana.<sup>5</sup> He is further called tarkatantraramaṇīkamanīyakakānta<sup>6</sup>

On the ground of the presence of his descendants in village Bhatasimmari certain scholars are of opinion that that is the village Govinda lived in. 7 Dr. Miśra holds that Bhaduāra is the native village of Govinda. 8 Kaviśekhara Badarīnātha Jhā opines that Govinda lived in village Ganganli 9

Govinda himself says that he composed two works with names ending in pradipa and two with names ending in dipikā. 10 They are as follows:-

- 1. Kāvyapradīpa
- 2. Pūjāpradīpa
- 3. Udāharaņadīpikā11

4. ibid. (verse No 3).

10. vide kāvyapradīpa p.403.

<sup>1.</sup> Published, Mithila research Institute, Darbhanga 1960.

<sup>2.</sup> vide p.1 (verse No 4).

<sup>3.</sup> ibid.

cf. ācāryo 'pi vicāryate yadavadhir naiyāyiko vā na vā - ibid verse No 4 (c).

<sup>6.</sup> op.cit., - p.190 (verse No 23(a).

<sup>7.</sup> vide Mithilä-tattva-vimarsa - I - p.226.

<sup>8.</sup> vide History of Maithill literature I p.222.

vide Introduction (p.2.) to the Rasatarangini of Ramananda Thakkura, published Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.

According to S.K. De it is "apparently same as Ślokadīpikā in Stein - p.XXVIII - 60, 269; cited by Nāgojibhaţţa, vide History of Sanskrit Potics - p.163.

Poetics 119

4. Kāvyadīpikā1

Besides, one more work Kṛṣṇastotra, a devotional composition is ascribed to MM. Govinda Thakkura<sup>2</sup>

The Udāharaṇadīpikā is an expository treatise calculated to explain the illustrative verses pertaining to the kāvyaprakāša. It has been cited by Vaidyanātha Tatsat in his Udāharaṇa-candrikā. The only fragments of the Udāharaṇa-dīpikā available to us are by way of quotations in posterior works.

So far as the date of Govinda is concerned, Bhat, after an examination of "a good deal of evidence both external and internal" has tried to prove that Govinda" flourished during circa 1465-1550 A.D."<sup>5</sup>

MM. Govinda's son, MM. Devanātha wrote a work on poetics, Rasikaprakāša, besides kāvyakaumudī, a commentary on the Kāvyaprakāša.

The contribution of Kavirāja Bhānudatta6 to the cf. P.V. Kane: History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.409; vide also Bhat's papers sentitled 'Mahā-mahopādhyāya Govinda Thakkura - his date and works' published in the Journal of the University of Bombay - vol. XXVIII - New Series part II - September 1959 and styled 'Pujāpradīpa of Govinda Thakkura' published in the Bhāratīya Vidyā -Vol. XXVI - Nos 1-4, 1966.

vide p.93 of the paper contributed by the late Pandita Trilokanatha Miśra in the Mithilanka number of the Mithila Mihir; vide also Singh: History of Tirhut p.132.

<sup>3.</sup> vide pp.50, 52, 84 et. seq.

<sup>4.</sup> vide p.3 of introduction to the Mantrakaumudi.

vide pp.132-133 of his paper referred to above published in the Journal of the University of Bombay.

<sup>6.</sup> For details vide supra pp.8-11.

Poetics 121

three chapters respectively. The fourth has for its subject matter an analysis of the sattvika-emotions and the fifth deals with the variant-emotions. The sixth is an account of the nature of the Erotic sentiment. A discussion on the nature of the process of the realization of poetic sentiment is the theme of the seventh and the last is a miscellany.

In the Rasatarangini Bhanudatta has introduced a ninth sattvika-emotion, called 'jṛmbha'. In he has cited a verse from the Rasaratnadīpikā, traditionally attributed to his fahter MM. Gaṇapati.

Since in his Rasatarangini Bhanudatta tells us that he has dealt with the various types of heroes and heroines in his work, entiled Rasa-manjari, it is evident that the latter was composed earlier the former.

The Alankāratilaka is divided into five chapters, called pariccheda. The first deals with the different forms of style and diction; the second delineates poetic blemishes; the third is devoted to an elucidation of the nature of poetic excellence; The fourth concerns with poetic embellishments pertaining to word and the last depicts those relating to meaning. The self-composed illustrations enterspersed with the verse of the author's father are fine pieces of poetry. He craves the indulgence of art-connoisseurs and requests them to treat this Alankāramanjarī of his as an ornament. Since, after the present work is composed, great rhetoricians like Dandin and Vamana are all shoved to the background.1

<sup>1.</sup> Vide ibid. p.198.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide, ibid. p.181.

<sup>3.</sup> vide ibid. p.218.

Dr. J.B. Chaudhuri refers to one Kāvya-dīpikā of Bhānudatta.<sup>2</sup> The book is published but inspite of repeated efforts we could not procure a copy thereof.

Bhānudatta is also traditionally credited with the authorship of one Śṛṅgāradīpikā but, as no manuscript of it is available, nothing can be said regarding its corpus with any degree of certainty.

In the Alankāratilaka Bhānudatta refers to his Citracandrikā.<sup>3</sup> From the name of the work and the manner in which the reference to it has been made, it appears reasonable to infer that probably the work is concerned with an elucidation of the nature of citra-kāvya but, since no manuscript of the said work is available, we are groping in darkness so far as its details are concerned.

Bhānudatta is also traditionally believed to have written an auto-commentary on his Rasamañjarī but the same is not available.

KEŚAVA MIŚRA

Keśava Miśra, the author of the Alankāra-śekhara hailed from Mithilā. He was the son of MM. Narahari and the grand-son of MM. Paramaguru Vācaspati and the great-grand-son of Sanmiśra Giripati of the Samauti-branch of the Pālī-family. He

cf. dandīyati yoto dandī Vāmanī yati vāmanah / tad alankāratilakam dhīrāh kurvansu bhūşanam //.

<sup>2.</sup> vide Muslim patronage to Sanskrit Learning vol. I - pp.2-3.

cf. 'citragūḍhaprahelikāpraśnottarāāni citracandrikāyām darśayiṣyāmaḥ' - vide kavirājabhānudattagranthāvalī - p.295.

belonged to the Vatsagotra. He is credited with the authorship of the Dvaitapariŝiṣṭa, a supplement to the Dvaitanirṇaya of his grand-father, Vācaspati.

Before composing the Alankarašekhara Kešava had already written, as he himself says, seven treatises on poetics but they were all written in a dialectic style comprehensible only by those well-versed in logical discipline and hence he changed his pattern in the Alankārašekhara. Unfortunately, none of these seven works adverted to above is available. kešava, however, has refered to two of them. They are: Alankārasarvasva² and Kāvyaratna.3

Keśava was a protege of Mahārāja Māṇikya candra, son of Mahārāja Dharma-candra and grand-son of Mahārā Rāma-candra of Kota-kangra and it was at his instance that he composed the Alaikāra-śekhara. Mānikyacandra succeeded his father in 1563 A.D.<sup>4</sup> This places on author in the sixteenth century A.D. and this is in consonance with the age assigned to his grand-father, Vācaspati (1400-1490 A.D.). Besides, we are also informed of a ms of the Prakāša-commentary of MM. Rucidatta ibid. p.72 (The name Vākyaratna mentioned on p.12 appears to be inadvertently used for Kāvyarana. According to singh, the work cited twice is Vākyaratna, vide History of Tirhut p.133 foot-note 2. Nothing, however, can be pronounced finally).

<sup>1.</sup> vide verse No 3, p.1 (NSP edition).

<sup>2.</sup> ibid., pp. 9 and 38.

vide cunningham : Archaeological Survey of India - Vol. V-p.160 (cf. De : History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.218, foot-note 3).

vide D.C. Bhattacharya: History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā - p.158.

on the Tattva-cintāmaņi of Gangeśa copied by Keśava; dated L.S.473, corresponding to 1592 A.D.

The Alankāraśekhara is divided into eight sections, called ratna and twenty-two sub-sections, styled marīci. The kārikā-s are attributed to Śauddhodam and the vṛtti-s are Keśava's. All the leading topics of poetics are dealt with in the work.

The Rasatarangini<sup>2</sup> of Rāmānanda Thakkura<sup>3</sup> is complete in seven chapters, called taranga. It has for its theme a comprehensive study of the nature of different varieties of heroes and heroines. As is the case with similar other treatises of this nature so very characteristic of maithilā, the Rasataranginī also countains illustrative verses composed by the author himself.

Rāmānanda has introduced a new variety of the mugdhā-type of heroine. It is called jūātājūātasvayauvanā<sup>4</sup>

Kavīndra Gaṅgānanda<sup>5</sup> composed the following works on poetics:-

- (a) Karnabhūşana6
- (b) Kavyadakini7

<sup>1.</sup> vide Singh: History of Tirhut p.144 (foot-note 4).

<sup>2.</sup> Published Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga 1961.

<sup>3.</sup> For details vide supra p.13.

<sup>4.</sup> For definition and illustration thereof vide pp.3-4.

<sup>5.</sup> For details vide supra pp.17-19.

<sup>6.</sup> Published, N.S.P. Bombay, 1902.

<sup>7.</sup> Published, Sarasvati Bhawan Texts, Benares, 1924.

- (c) Śrngāravanamālā1
- (d) Alasamodinī2

The Karṇabhūṣaṇa consists of five chapters, called pariccheda, dealing with the nature of poetic sentiment (rasa). The first three chapters are devoted to an elucidation of its three accredited constituents, namely, adherent-cum-excitant, ensuant and variant in arial order. The fourth chapter concerns itself with the basic emotion, whereas the last has for its theme an exposition of the nature of the process of the realization of the poetic sentiment. Gaṅgānanda has given his own mellifluous verse saturated with devotion to Lord Kṛṣṇa as illsutrations.

The Kāvyaḍākinī is a unique work – unique in the sense that it is devoted exclusively to the elucidation of the nature of poetic blemishes. It is divided into five chapters, called dṛṣṭi. The first chapter begins with the definition of poetic blemish and proceeds to classify it into five types: blemishes pertaining to a word; those pertaining to the part of a word; those relating to a sentence; those relative to the meaning and those concerning poetic sentiments. And then sixteen varieties of the first, i.e., poetic blemishes pertaining to a work are defined, explained and illustrated. The subsequent chapters deal with the remaining four classes of poetic blemishes in arial order.

In the Śrńgāravanamālā the author establishes

Published; for the first time edited by the present author as a part of the Kavīndragangā nandagranthāvalī, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.

Edited by the present author for the first time and published by VVRI, Hoshiarpur, 1964 in the journal of the Institute.

the supremacy of the erotic sentiment and following in the foot steps of Bhāmadatta proceeds to define and discuss the different types of heroines. he also gives his own verse as illustrations. His style is simple and lucid.

A special feature of the Śṛṅgāravanamālā is that Gaṅgānanda has introduced a new type of heroine, naming her āgacchat-patikā (one whose husband is on his way back to his abode to meet her). In support of his new classification he says that this variety of heroine cannot be subsumed under any other traditionally accepted variety. He starts discussing this type of heroine but the manuscript forming the basis of our edition breaks off in the last foot of the verse illustrating the mugdhā-variety of this type of heroine.<sup>1</sup>

The Alasamodinī is a composition meant for the beginner. The phraseology is very simple and only broad outlines have been presented. The work deals with the classification of different types of heroes and heroines and their moods and accessories. Divided into three reactions, entitled pranaya, the Alasamodinī is a supplement to the author's other works on poetics.

The Rasamahārņava<sup>2</sup> of MM. Gokulanāthā Upādhyāya<sup>3</sup>is a work on poetics dealing with lakṣaṇā, but it appears to be a part of a voluminous work dealing with abhidhā and vyanjanā as well.

Vide the present writer's paper entitled "The Śringāravanamālā of Kavīndra Gangānanda of Mithilā" published in the G.J.K.S. Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, Vol.X -Jan.-Dec. Parts 1-4, 1984.

<sup>2.</sup> Published, K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, 1981.

<sup>3.</sup> For details vide supra pp.22-25.

Poetics 127

MM. INDRAPATI

In the K.S.D.S. University is preserved a manuscript of an unnamed work on sanskrit poetics dealing with figures of speech<sup>1</sup>. Unfortunately, the manuscript is incomplete. It breaks off in the middle and contains only the first twenty folio. But the portion available is, however, highly informative and it goes a long way in establishing the age and identity of the author.<sup>2</sup>

The author of the work is MM. Indrapati, the author of the Mīmāhsā palvala. He was the son of MM. Rucipati and the grand-son of MM. Nīlakaṇṭha of the Behaṭa-branch of the Karamahā-family of the śrotriya-s of Mithilā. This MM. Nīlakaṇṭha was the younger brother of MM. Harihara, the author of the Sūktimuktāvalī alias Hariharasubhāṣita. Since MM. Indrapati had composed this work on figure of speech for the mental satisfaction of Nandīpati alias Bādari, a bhāṣā-kan (Vernacular-poet), who was respected and honoured by Viṣṇusinha, the king of Mithilā, was ascended the throne in 1739 A.D., a date earlier than that cannot be assigned to the composition of the present work.

In addition to MM. Indrapati, these are two prominent writers of the 18th century A.D. who have contributed to Sanskrit poetics. They are Venīdatta and Citradhara.

<sup>1.</sup> MS no. 13 of bundle no. 292.

For details vide the present author's paper entitled "Some forgotten literateurs of Mithila" published in J.B.R.S. vol. XLVIII - pts I-IV Jan.-Dec. 1962.

VENĪDATTA

Venīdatta was the fifth son of Sadupādhyāya Jagannātha and grand-son of Kavi Jayakṛṣṇa of the same Behaṭa-branch of the Karamahā-family. His younger sister Satīmahārānī became satī at the age of fourteen only in the year 1739 A.D. When her husband Mahārāja Rāghavasimha shuffled off, his mortal coils. One of the sister of Venīdatta was married to Ekanātha Ţhakkura, father of Mahārāja Mādhavasimha (1775-1807) of the Khaṇḍabalā-family. Venīdatta is said to have enjoyed the patronage of his sister's son, Mahārāja Mādhava.

The Rasakaustubha and the Alankara-manjarī are the two works on poetics composed by Venīdatta.

The Rasakaustubha<sup>2</sup> deals with the poetic sentiments, the excitants, the adherents, the ensuants, the variants and the like in extenso. A detailed classification of the types of heroes and heroines is followed by the author's own definitions and illustrations. Some of his verses are amusing.<sup>3</sup>

The Alankāramanjarī<sup>4</sup> is a preliminary treatise on poetic embellishments, useful for the beginner. The definition of embellishments in simple language is followed by illustrative verse composed by the author himself. The verses are mostly mediocre and devoid of peotic charm. Some of the verses are but vide the concluding verse of the Rasakaustubha.

Published; it has many editions.

vide the dialogue between Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa in the opening benedictory verse of the Rasa-kaustubha.

<sup>4.</sup> Published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.

slavish imitation of immortal pieces of poetry. The Alankāramanjarī is a last work. For, in it the author has cited verse from Rasakaustubha and Virudāvalī. The late kavišekhara Badarīnātha Jhā, the learned editor of the Alankāramanjarī, is of the opinion that Venīdatta had composed a Virudāvalī also probably to eulogize his sister's son and patron and from it a verse has been quoted in the Alankāramanjarī. 2

The Śṛṅgārasāriṇī³ of MM. Citradhara⁴ deals with the Erotic sentiment in all its different phases. The author has discussed in detail the nature of Śṛṅgāra, rati, Kāmadaśā, māna, nāyikā-s and nāyaka-s and their accessories. He has given fine verse as illustrations, most of which are his own. He records the views of the preceding theorists of poetry with due acknolwedgement and gives his own emendations, wherever possible.

The Viratarangini<sup>5</sup>is a short treatise when compared to the Śṛṅgārasārini. It deals with the Heroic sentiment exclusively. The four types of vīra-s: yuddhavīra, dānavīra, dayāvīra and dharmavīra have been discussed here in detail with copious illustrations, most of which are author's own.

Bhānunātha<sup>6</sup> a protege of Mahārāja

Compare verse No 7 (p.2) with Mudrārākşasa-Act I - verse
 1 and verse No 209 (p.42) with the Bhaṭṭikāvya - Canto II - Verse No 19.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide Introduction.

Edited and published by the present author with financial assistance from the Ministry of Education, Govt. of India, Darbhanga, 1965.

<sup>4.</sup> For details vide supra p.27.

<sup>5.</sup> Same as above (No 64).

<sup>6.</sup> For details vide supra p.37.

Maheśvarasimha (1850-1860 A.D.) composed a small treatise on poetics, entitled Sṛṅgāra-mañjarī. It contains fiftyeight verse in all composed in anuṣṭubh-metre and divided into two chapters, called ullāsa. The first deals with the nature of Śṛṅgāra-rasa - its definition and classification, the heroes and heroines, whereas the second presents the description of a heroine from top to toe and the definition of the four types of heroines, namely, Padminī, Citrīṇī, Hastinī and Śaṅkhinī. The simplicity of the style of the work makes it easily understandable to the neophyte.

Lekhanātha Jhā<sup>2</sup> composed a small manual of poetics, Rasacandrikā<sup>3</sup> by name. It contains 194 verses only and deals with the various types of heroes and heroines. The author has supplied his own definitions and illustrations. The work is dedicated to his patron, Mahārājādhirāja Kameśvarasimha the last Mahārāja of the Khanḍabalā-family (1929-1962).

Kavišekhara Badarīnātha Jha<sup>4</sup> wrote an independent digest on poetics, entitled Sāhitya-mīmāmsā.<sup>5</sup> In a short span of 69 verses only all main topics of poetics have been dealt with.

YADUNĀTHA MIŚRA

Yadunātha Miśra, the vetran scholar of Grammar and Logic, was born in 1885 A.D. in the

Edited by the present author of Shri Tantranath Jha felicitation volume, Darbhanga, 1980, pp.67-73.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra p.44.

<sup>3.</sup> Published Vidyapati Press, Darbhanga San, 1347 fasli.

<sup>4.</sup> For details vide supra pp.45-47.

<sup>5.</sup> Published in Jha Commemoration Volume, Poona, 1937.

illustrious Sarisava-branch of the Sodarapura-family of the Śrotriya-s. He was the son of Paṇḍita Jayanātha Miśra. He lived in village Lālagañja, district Madhubani. He died a premature death in 1928 A.D. Among his Sāhityā-works the Vyañjanāvāda¹ diserves special mention. It discusses the nature of Vyañjanā (suggestion) and its place in the realm of the belles-lettres. The author establishes the ground for the admission of suggestion with remarkable perspicuity.

MM. Bālakṛṣṇa Miśra² composed two unpublished treatises on Sanskrit poetics, namely, Lakṣaṇāparīkṣā and Vyaktinirāsa dealing with Lakṣaṇā and Vyañjanā respectively.

Änanta Jhā<sup>3</sup> composed Dhvanikallolinī,<sup>4</sup> a work dealing with the suggested meaning (dhvani) and Girijānanda Jhā<sup>5</sup>wrote Alankārakusuma on figures of speech.

One Bhāva Miśra, son of Bhaṭaka Miśra is credited with the authorship of the Śṛṅgārasarasī, a treatise on Erotic sentiment. An anthology, entitled Sabhyālaṅkaraṇa, also contains eleven verses composed by Bhāva Miśra. We are not certain if the two are identical. Sukhadeva Miśra's Śṛṅgāralatā and Śrīkara Miśra's Alaṅkāratilaka are also treated as

<sup>1.</sup> Published Vaishali Press, Muzaffarpur, 1922.

<sup>2.</sup> For details vide supra pp.44-45.

<sup>3.</sup> For details vide supra p.49.

<sup>4.</sup> Published K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga, 1978.

<sup>5.</sup> For details vide supra p.52.

<sup>6.</sup> S.K. De: History of Sanskrit poetics - p.292.

<sup>7.</sup> Verse Nos 211, 214, 217, 218, 225, 244, 286, 372, 444, 452, and 567.

works of poetics by scholars of Mithilā.¹ One Śańkara Miśra of Mithilā is also credited with the authorship of Sāhityakalikā, a work on rhetoric and prosody.² One Upamākantuka, an unpublished work is ascribed to Hīraṇa. The learned editor of the Ekāvalī of MM. Gokulanātha tells us that Hīra and Hīraṇa are the names of MM. Bhīṣma Miśra himself who is the eighteenth century author of the Vṛttadarpaṇa,³ a work on prosody but since we have not been able to go through the work nothing can be said with certainty. He is treated as identical with the author of Gītaśaṅkara, comprising eleven cantos. Following is an alaphabetical list of commentators hailing from Mithilā on works on Sanskrit poetics:-

Abhinavavācaspati Miśra

 S/o Giripati Miśra - on Kāvyaprakāśa

Acyuta Thakkura - on Kāvyaprakāśa

3. Ananta - Vyangyārthakaumudī on Rasamañjarī

Badarīnātha - Dīdhiti on Dhvanyāloka

Surabhi on Rasamañjarī

- Candrikā

on Rasagangadhara

Bahurūpa Miśra - on Daśarūpaka

on Vānuādarha

6. Bhagiratha

- on Kāvyādarša

 Vide S.C. Banerji: Contribution of Bihar to Sanskrit literature p.127.

3. Vide Introduction p. 'ta'.

Vide Dr. Jayamanta Miśra's paper entitled "Contribution of Bihar to Sanskrit Rhetoric" published in the Proceedings of the International Sanskrit Confrence, Vol. I, Part I pp.125-128, New Delhi, 1975.

7.	Bhāskara Miśra	<ul> <li>Sāhityadīpikā</li> <li>on Kāvyaprakāśa</li> </ul>
8.	Bhavadeva	- Līlā
- 77		- on Kāvyaprakāša
9.	Caturbhuja Miśra	- Sāhityavilāsa on Kāvyaprakāša
10.	Devanātha	- continued mis
	Thakkura	<ul> <li>Kāvyakaumudi</li> <li>on Kāvyaprakāša</li> </ul>
11.	Gaṅgānātha Jhā	- (English translation of Kāvyaprakāśa)
12.	Gokulanatha
	Upadhyāya	- Vivarana
		- on Kāvyaprakāśa
13.	Govinda Thakkura	<ul> <li>Kāvyapradīpa</li> <li>Udāharaņadīpika</li> <li>on Kāvyaprākāša</li> </ul>
14.	Harinātha	<ul> <li>on Kävyädarśa</li> <li>Mārjanā</li> <li>on Sarasvatīkanthābharana</li> </ul>
15.	Hariśańkara	- Nāgešvarī
2000		- on Kāvyaprakāśa
16.	Jagaddhara	- on Sarasvatīkanthābharana
17.	Jayarāma	- on Kāvyaprakāśa
18.	Kalyāņa Upādhyāy	a - on Kāvyaprakāša
19.	Khuddī Jhā	- on Kāvyaprakāśa
20.	Kṛṣṇamohana
1000	Thakkura	- Lakşmi on Sāhityādarpaņa
21.	Madhusüdana
21.	Thakkura	- on Kavyaprakasa
		12.3

22.	Mahādeva Miśra -	Rasodadhi
-		on Rasataranginī
		Bhānuprakāšinī on Rasamañjarī
23.	Maheśvara -	on Kāvyālankārasūtra
24.	Manodhara	Kāvyadarpaņa
	alias Ratnapāņi Thakkura	on Kāvyaprakāśa
25.	Mukunda -	on Kāvyaprakāśa
26.	Murāri Miśra (S/o Śrīkṛṣṇa Miśra)	on Kāvyaprakāśa
27.	Nānyadeva -	- Sarasvatīhṛdayālankāra
0.000		on Nāṭyaśāstra
28.	Narasimha -	on Kāvyādarśa
29.	Narasimha Thakkara	a - Narasimha-manīṣā
		- on Kāvyaprakāśa
30.	Padmanābha Miśra	- on Kāvyaprakāśa
31.
	alias Jayadeva	- on Kāvyaprakāśa
32.	Paṇḍitarāja	- on Kāvyaprakāša
33.	Rāmacandra Jhā	- on Kāvyādoša on Kuvalayānanda on Rudraţālaṅkāra
34.	Ratneśarva	on Kāvyaprakāša
		Ratnadarpana
		on Sarasvatīkaņļhābharaņa
35.	Ravi Thakkura	- Madhumatī
	Olivinas on kwaksi	on Kāvyaprakāśa
36.	Rucikara Miśra	- on Kāvyaprakāša
37.		- on Kāvyalahkārasūtra
38.		<ul> <li>Nidarśana on Kāvyaprakāśa</li> </ul>
39.	Śrīdhara Thakkura	<ul> <li>Viveka on Kāvyaprakāša</li> </ul>

40. Subuddhi Miśra - Tattvaparīkṣā on Kāvyaprakāša - Sähityasarvasva on Kavyalankarasütra 41. Surendra Jhā - Snehavaşinī on Kāvyadīpikā on Kāvyādarša Taruņavācaspati 42. Venīdatta on Kāvyaprakāša 43. Vijayānanda on Kāvyādarśa 44. Viśvanātha - on Kāvyādarša 45. 46. Yaśodhara - on Kavyaprakaśa

6. PROSODY

HALÄYUDHA

The earliest writer on prosody hailing from Mithilā appears to be Halāyudha, the author of a commentary on the Pingalachandassūtra. The Brālmaņasarvasva is his famous work. Most of posterior writers of digests on Dharmaśāstra cite him and his work an authority. He is said to have flourished in the eleventh century A.D.

RAVIKARA MIŚRA

Ravikara Miśra of the Dīrghaghoşa (Dighavaya)-family was an ancestor of Dāmodara Miśra, the author of the Vānībhūşana. Dāmodara, while illustrating the metre styled ratoddhatā refers to the high academic proficiency of his family in general and Ravikara in particular.

Ravikara is credited with the authorship of an original work on prosody, entitled Vṛṭṭaraṭnāvalī and also a commentary on Prākṛṭapingalasūṭra, styled pingalasāra vikāsinī.

DĀMODARA MIŚRA

Damodara was a court-poet of king Kirtisimha (1402-1410 A.D.)<sup>2</sup> and as such he can safely be assigned to the second half of the fourteenth and

cf. dirghaghoşakuladevadirghikā-pahkajam ravikaro vyarājata / īrşaye 'va duhituḥ payonidher yatra vāsam akarot sarasvatī //.

<sup>2.</sup> cf. 'Kīrtisimhanṛpa jīva' et. seq. (p.13 verse No 82).

Prosody 137

the first quarter of the fifteenth centurty A.D. He composed Vānībhūṣaṇa, a work on prosody.

HARIHARA

The Pingalarangini, a commentary on the Pingalachandassūtra is ascribed to Harihara.2

RAMĀPATI UDĀDHYĀYA

Ramāpati Upādhyāya, son of Kavišekhara Yašodhara of the Mangaraunī-branch of the Pālī-family, wrote Vṛttasāra³ and an auto commentary thereon Vṛttasārāloka⁴ by name. He is placed in the fifteenth century A.D. Padmanābha Miśra,⁵ son of Dāmodara Miśra of the Dighavaya-family wrote an independent treatise on prosody, entitled Chandoratna.⁵

GANGADĀSA

Gaṅgādāsa was the son of Vaidya Gopāladāsa. He was a Kāyastha. He composed Chandomañjarī, an original treatise on prosody. It is said to have flourished in the sixteenth century A.D.

Published, N.S.P., Bombay, 1925 (Kāvyamālā - 53).

Unpublished supplementary list of Mithilä manuscripts prepared by Bihar Research Society - Patna - Prosody -No 6.

Vide Des. cat. Mss in Mithila - vol. II Prosody - No 23;
 Unpublished list referred to above - No 17, 17A.

<sup>4.</sup> ibid., No 24.

<sup>5.</sup> For details vide supra p.12.

Vide J.A.S.B., 1915, p.388.

Digambara Thakkura<sup>1</sup> had written a work on prosody, entitled Vrttarahasya. It has been referred to in his Virudāvalī.<sup>2</sup>

DURGĀDATTA MIŚRA

Vṛttamuktāvalī<sup>3</sup> is the work on prosody composed by Durgādatta, "His time is not yet settled, but he cannot be placed earlier than the sixteenth century A.D.", says Singh. He is different from his name sake, a protege of Mahārāja Chatrasimha (1807-1839).

KĀLIDĀSA MIŚRA

One Kālidāsa Miśra, traditionally claimed to be a Maithila, composed Śruta-bodha consisting of 43 stanzas meant for providing an elementary knowledge of rhetoric and prosody to the beginner. Several scholars of Mithilā have written commentaries on it. Prominent among them are Manohara and Lakṣmīnārāyaṇa. The commentary f the former is called Subodhinī<sup>5</sup> and that of the itter Manoramā.<sup>6</sup>

MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya7 has two works

<sup>1.</sup> For details vide supra p.14.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide ibid.

Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila - vol. II - Prosody - No 19; Unpublished list referred to above - Nos 14, 14A-C, vide also Mithila Research Institute Ms No 4813.

<sup>4.</sup> Vide History of Tirhut - p.127.

Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila - Vol II Prosody No 26;
 Unpublished list referred to above Nos 22, 22A.

<sup>6.</sup> Vide Unpublished list referred to above No 20.

<sup>7.</sup> For details vide supra pp.22-25.

on prosody to his credit. They are Vṛṭṭaṭaraṅgiṇī and Ekāvali.

The Vṛttataraṅgiṇī, as the author himself says, is very voluminous. It is terse and most difficult to understand without a thorough knowledge of different Śāstras. Therefore, he composed Ekāvalī, an abridged digest dealing with all the famous metres in a plain and simple style for people in general and those desirous of a deeper knowledge of the subject have been advised to consult his Vṛttataraṅgiṇī.

The Ekāvalī, composed with precious gems from the ocean of metrical treatises, is complete in three chapters, called ratna. The first deals with prastāra in addition to introductory notes; the second gives an account of mātrāvṛtta and the third discusses the Varṇavṛtta.

MM. BHĪŞMA MIŚRA

MM. Bhīşma Miśra was the son of Maho. Dhīra Miśra of the Narasāma-branch of the Baliāsa-family. He flourished in the eighteenth century A.D. He wrote an independent treatise on prosody, entitled Vṛttadarpaṇa<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1.</sup> Vide Ekāvalī III verse No 55 (p.117).

<sup>2.</sup> ibid. verse No 56 (p.118).

<sup>3.</sup> Published, K.S.D.S. university, Darbhanga, 1985.

Vide Unpublished list of Mithila Mss. referred to above -Nos 13, 13A-E; Descriptive Cat. of Mss in Mithila - vol. II - Prosody - No 18; A copy of the ms is preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, No 3721.

RĀGHAVA JHĀ

Rāghava Jhā of village Taraurī, near Sakri Railway Station (NER) wrote the chandalı kalpataru.

VIDYĀNANDA MIŚRA

A commentary on the Pingalachandassūtra, styled Vidvanmanoramā<sup>2</sup> is ascribed to Vidyānanda Miśra.

JĀNAKĪNANDANA KAVĪNDRA

The V<sub>I</sub>ttadarpaŋa<sup>3</sup> is the name of the treatise on prosody written by Jānakīnandana kavindra.

KEŚAVA

One Keśava of Mithilā is said to have written Chandaḥ siddhāntabhāskara.

MADHUSŪDANA

Madhusūdana, traditionally believed to be a man from Mithilā, composed Mātrāvṛtta, 4 a work on prosody.

<sup>1.</sup> Vide Des. Cat. of Mss Mithila - Vol. II - Prosody - No 2.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide ibid. No 16.

Vide ibid. No 17; Unpublished list of Mithila Mss referred to above - Nos 12, 12A and Mithila Research Institute Ms No 5033.

Vide Unpublished list of Mithila Mss referred to above No 9. it is mentioned therein that the manuscript is in the possession of Madhusudana Miśra of village Haripura, P.O. Nehra.

Prosody 141

CIRAÑJĪVA

One cirañjiva hailing from Mithilä composed the Vrttaratnāvalī<sup>1</sup>

MM. BABUJANA JHĀ

In the nineteenth century flourished MM. Babujana Jha, son of MM. Dīnabandhu alias Nenana Jhā of the Sukheta-branch of the Khanāla-family in village Pilakhavāra, near Madhubani. He composed a work on prosody, named Chandaḥsudhākara.<sup>2</sup>

VASANTA MIŚRA

In the same century Vasanta Miśra, an inhabitant of village Tabhakā, district Samastipur, wrote a treatise on prosody, entiled Chandolata.

<sup>1.</sup> Vide ibid. Nos 16, 16A-C.

<sup>2.</sup> Vide ibid. No 4.

आशृतोष अवस्थी

49年福祉

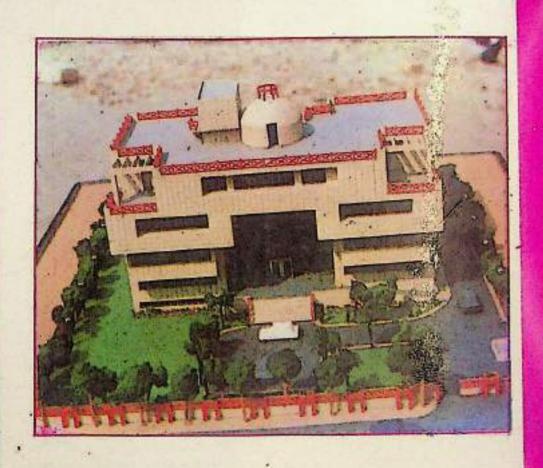

श्री नारायणकार १५ वेचा ( १८४)

Dr. Triloka Natha Iha, son of Late Smt. Indupriya Devi and Late Prof. Uma Natha Jha, born in 1934, completed his Honours Degree in English and M.A. in Sanskrit. He obtained his Ph.d. from Bihar University, served Bihar and L.N. Mithila Universities as a teacher for over 34 years and retired as Prof. and Head of Sanskrit Department.

Dr. Jha has edited several works, such as Śṛṅgāra-sāriṇi, Kavindra gangā-nanda granthāvalī etc. and contributed over two dozen research papers to National and International conferences research journals etc. Authored a monograph on Śaṅkara Miśra, Dr. Jha is presently a Śāstracūdāmaṇi scholar of Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan.

RASHTRIYA SANSKRIT SANSTHAN

A-40, Vishal Enclave, Raja Garden, New Delhi-110027 (INDIA)